YOUNG MAN KILLED BY AUTO IDENTIFIED AS CLERK FOR BANK

Victim Said by Two Men to Be William J. Bush, 21, Bookkeeper for the Boatmen's Bank.

STRUCK BY MACHINE ON GRAND BOULEVARD

Witnesses Say That Lights Were Extinguished on Car Driven by Herman W. Luehr.

A man killed by an automobile on Grand boulevard, just north of Keokuk street, at 12:45 a. m. today, was identified at the morgue this afternoon as William J. Bush, 21 years old, of 3906 Lindell boulevard, a bookkeeper employed at the Boatmen's Bank and a stepson of Constable Floyd Bush of Justice of the Peace McChesney's Court.

The automobile was driven by Herman W. Luehr, 31, of 4100A Lafayette avenue, and the accident was witnessed by several persons, including Police Inspector Gerk and two patrolmen. Luehr was driving north on Grand boulevard and Bush was attempting to cross the street from the east side, evidently to board an approaching Grand car.

At the time of the accident Bush was returning from the home of a girl.

Witnesses said that Luehr's automobile lights were extinguished at the time of the accident and that he was going at about 25 miles an hour. Luehr, when arrested, said the lights had been extinguished in the collision, but the crew of a northbound street car said the lights were out when the automobile passed the street car just before the accident. Inspector Gerk said he inspected the lights after the accident and found them in working order. Luehr said that he was driving at between 20 and 25 miles an hour.

Luehr applied the brake in an effort to avoid hitting Bush. The automobile skidded 50 feet before striking Bush and about 25 feet after striking him. His skull was fractured and he was killed instantly.

Woman, 72, Cut and Bruised in Collision of Autos.

Mrs. Sarah Applegate, 72 years old, of Lawrenceville, N. J., was cut and bruised when an automobile driven by her son, William D. Applegate, 1256A Aubert avenue, collided with an automobile driven by Jacob Thomann of Red Light, St. Louis County, near the intersection of Broadway and Riverview Drive, at 8:15 last night. Thomann's car was overturned, but he was not hurt.

Edwin Pfluger, 7723 Vermont street, suffered a fractured left knee when thrown from his motor cycle in a collision with an automobile driven by Philip Martin, 5360 Nottingham avenue, at Seventh and Sidney streets, at 9:30 p. m. A young woman, who had been riding with Pfluger and whose name the police did not obtain, left the scene of the accident, complaining of pains in her side.

Miss Lucille Schleater, 18, of 4572 Pope avenue, suffered dislocation of the left shoulder and cuts on the head and face when an automobile driven by Frank C. Johnson, 5227 North Market street, in which she was riding, overturned on the North and South road, in St. Louis County, at 10 p. m.

Fred Schmidtz, 18, of 1715 South Tenth street, a messenger, was knocked from his bicycle in a collision with an automobile driven by Chris Wallace, a negro, of 2928 Pine street, at Fourteenth and Pine streets at 7 p. m. His right thigh was fractured.

Jacqueline Felcher, 7 years old, residing with her grandparents at 1883A Hodiamont avenue, suffered several broken ribs, an injury to the skull and internal injuries when struck by an automobile driven by DeWight Thomas, 27 Windermere place, in front of her home at 3:30 p. m. yesterday.

SMALL LOAN TO GERMANY SUGGESTED BY BANKERS

International Committee Takes Stand Against Any Large Advance at the Present Time.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 10.—An important conclusion arrived at by the International Committee of Bankers as set forth today in their final report to the Allied Reparations Commission, is that, although a large international loan to Germany cannot be recommended at the present time, the subject can be taken up later and that, meanwhile, a relatively small loan, to prevent a financial collapse in Germany, might be arranged if necessities should require it.

The bankers recognize that the problems on which they were asked to give their opinion involved interests so complex that it appears impossible, for the time being at least, to offer a practical solution of the European difficulties. They do not, however, relinquish the hope of succeeding as events develop and consequently are far from considering their task completed. They but postpone it to the near future.

The committee held its final meeting today, adjourning sine die after adopting its report. J. P. Morgan left for London and will sail for New York early next week.

HARDING SAYS COLLEGE LIFE BEATS PRESIDENCY

No Position to Which Students Can't Aspire, and They Have More Fun, He Declares.

By the Associated Press.

TRENTON, N. J., June 10.—Business is improving and wages, through readjusting, are never going down to pre-war levels, President Harding told an audience in Trenton from a train platform last night. The crowd shouted, "Atta boy." His speech was made en route to Washington after two days in New Jersey. Speaking of readjustment, he said:

"We must say to capital that wages must not go back, and ought not to go back entirely to pre-war levels." There was a cheer and a woman yelled:

"Atta boy, Harding."

"The world war would indeed have been a failure and the sacrifices made in our behalf would have been in vain," the President continued, "if we should go back. Yet you cannot have employment without reasonable profit for capital."

The President yesterday dedicated a monument to the achievements of George Washington in Princeton. Before the Princeton student body he said: "I care not what position a man may momentarily be in," he exclaimed, "you can measure his standard of usefulness to America by the service he renders the community in which he resides.

"Doctor,"—the President turned to Dean West—"I care not who one is, if he can only expend his power in righteousness, he shall not have lived in vain. We can only ask God to let us make our way in righteousness, and if, in that making, we can make our way religious, we'll be a little bit better for that."

Princeton students marched out to cheer the President just before his train left and they got a little speech. The President said:

"There is no picture to be compared with that which you get from college youths in optimism for the future. There isn't any position in American life to which you boys can't aspire. It is a good deal better to be a college youth than President. Oh, it's lots more fun to be a college youth than to be President, boys."

SPECIAL TRAIN TAKES DOCTOR TO CONFERENCE

Dr. George Dock Called to Detroit by Physicians Attending Mayor Couzens.

Dr. George Dock of 4 North King's highway, professor in charge of the department of medicine of the Washington University School of Medicine, went to Detroit on a special train that left Union Station at 12:15 this morning, to attend a consultation of physicians and surgeons attending Mayor James Couzens of that city, who was operated on Wednesday for a bladder abscess, his second operation in six weeks.

Dr. Dock arrived at Detroit at 12:30 this afternoon, Eastern standard time. He said Mayor Couzens' condition was satisfactory, and that he would return to St. Louis tonight.

The special train, consisting of a Pullman coach and a baggage car, with a fast road locomotive, was run by the Wabash Railroad, and made the distance of 488 miles in about 11 hours, three hours faster than the time of limited passenger trains. The average speed was about 44 miles an hour and the maximum considerably higher. Dr. Dock and the train crew were the only persons on board.

Dispatches state that Mayor Couzens' condition has been improving since the operation. Dr. Dock is the former tutor of Dr. Hugo A. Freund, the Mayor's physician, and made the trip because of this acquaintance. Dr. Dock did not want to leave his work and the special train was arranged to induce him to go.

The medical men at Detroit telephoned Dr. Dock yesterday and discussed the case, and at 9 p. m. telephoned L. A. Blatterman, general passenger agent here for the Wabash, to prepare the train.

Blatterman said today that he called for Dr. Dock with his automobile at 11:55 last night. The physician took five minutes to pack his grip. They were at Union Station at 12:10 a. m. and five minutes later the train, which had been ready at 10:30 p. m. departed.

"Mrs. Dock didn't say much about this hurry call," Blatterman remarked. "She is a physician's wife. I told the doctor that when he got to Detroit he would know he had been running some. He was game, and said 'All right.'"

The special train cost $2500.

HOW TO GET RID OF CHIGGERS TOLD IN HEALTH BULLETIN

Dusting of Sublimated Flowers of Sulphur on Skin, Clothing and Stockings Is Recommended.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., June 10.—How to overcome chiggers, now so prevalent, is told in a bulletin by the Texas Industrial Congress.

Dusting of sublimated flowers of sulphur on the skin or clothing, especially the stockings and undergarments, is recommended by the congress. A hot bath with a thick lather of soap immediately after exposure, the bulletin said, will kill many of the larvae. Sulphur ointment, alcohol, a diluted solution of iodine or camphor will soothe the itching, it was stated in the instructions for keeping the pests at bay.

GRIFFITH TO MEET LLOYD GEORGE FOR CONFERENCE TODAY

President of Dail Eireann and British Premier Expected to Reach Agreement on Irish Questions.

FRONTIER TROUBLES SMOOTHED AWAY

Late Reports Indicate Belleek Operation Was Without Casualties—Collins Makes Speech at Dublin.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 10.—After today's meeting of the British signatories of the Anglo-Irish treaty it was stated that Arthur Griffith, President of the Dail Eireann, would meet Prime Minister Lloyd George this afternoon and that it was likely a settlement of the questions at issue would be reached.

So much optimism regarding the progress of the Irish negotiations is felt in Government quarters that it was believed Colonial Secretary Churchill will be able to make his statement on the position next Monday, when the House of Commons reassembles. The main questions which created difficulties when the draft of the Irish constitution was first submitted are now understood to have been settled satisfactorily with the technical matters on a fair way to adjustment.

The Ulster frontier troubles has been smoothed away temporarily, at least, and Michael Collins' speech in Dublin last night is taken here as indicating that the southern leaders are determined to avoid anything likely to keep the wound open. Nothing further has been heard from Collins' protest over the occupation of Pettigoe by the military, and it is inferred that the British Government has given assurances acceptable to Dublin.

Latest reports tend to confirm that the Belleek operation was bloodless, no trace of any Republican loss having been discovered. This has apparently quieted some of the anxieties in Dublin.

The Daily Mail's Dublin correspondent understands that if it were arranged that the British troops would hold the border temporarily, replacing the Ulster special Constables, all the Irish republican army regulars would be withdrawn from their neighborhood. Such an arrangement, he said, is favored in the southern circles.

Collins' speech at last night's Mansion House meeting apparently was intended as a partial outline of the future policy of the south toward the north.

British Gave Information That Caused Ship Seizure.

(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, June 10.—Seizure of the American vessel East Side in the United States last year when a cargo of arms for Ireland was found on board resulted from information given the State Department by the British Government, the Post-Dispatch learns officially today.

British secret service men on this side of the Atlantic had learned of a scheme to smuggle arms into Ireland. Later the State Department asked that one of them be sent to America to testify.

But meanwhile the British had signed a truce with the Irish, and to avoid the publicity which would attend their participation in a trial of those who had aided their new friends, the British refused.

Collins Sees Great Difficulties for New Parliament.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, June 10.—A meeting was held at Mansion House last evening in support of candidates for Parliament chosen by the Free Staters and the Republicans. Eamonn de Valera presided.

Michael Collins in a speech said he could foresee for the new Parliament great difficulties. Ireland had passed from the stage of violent revolution to a stage of lesser revolution, but was not yet out of the revolutionary stage. The country now was a good deal poorer than it was a year ago.

"We are faced by a situation," Collins continued, "in which inertia is coming into the national life and productivity is reduced."

Boys on Bank at Angelica Street Tell Police Companions of Joseph Studits Fled From Scene.

Joseph Studits, 12 years old, son of Frank Studits of 3615 North Broadway, was drowned about noon today when swimming in the river at Angelica street.

Police from the Sixth District station investigated when told of the drowning by a negro, and found a group of boys at the river bank with a bundle of clothes. They said the clothing belonged to Joseph, and that other boys had run away when efforts to save Studits failed.

Mrs. Studits identified the clothing as that of her son, who, she said, had left home early in the morning, not saying where he was going. The body has not been recovered, and the police are looking for the boys who left the scene, to get further details.

CARBIDE THROWN INTO YARD CAUSES DEATH OF PULLETS

Chickens Bloated After Eating Grains and Drinking; Some Saved by Puncturing of Crops.

Henry Deppe of Belleville had an unusual experience with his flock of pullets yesterday. When he found some of his chickens dead in the yard and others strutting about in pouter pigeon fashion, inflated to the point of reeling and falling, he investigated and found the hens had eaten bits of carbide from discarded miners' lamps which some one had thrown into the yard. Seized with a thirst after picking up grains which they supposed were chat, the chickens hastened to a water trough and then the puffing began. Water mixed with the carbide caused the chickens to become bloated.

After Deppe and his wife had diagnosed the ailment, they proceeded to puncture the crops of the fowls and in this way saved half the flock.

BILL IN HOUSE FOR PUBLICITY FOR ALL CAMPAIGN GIFTS

Andrews Introduces Measure to Limit Candidates to $10,000 Expenditure for Senate, $5000 for House.

NO OFFICE-SEEKER COULD PROMISE JOBS

All Agencies Trying to Influence Elections in Two or More States Would Have to Report.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Sweeping regulations for publicity of campaign contributions are provided for in a bill introduced today by Chairman Andrews, of the House Committee on election of President, Vice President and Members of Congress.

While the bill makes no attempt to regulate primary expenditures in view of the decision of the Supreme Court in the Newberry case that such regulation came within the province of the States, it would limit expenditures by candidates for the Senate to $10,000 and candidates for the House to $5,000 and stipulate that no candidate shall promise any man a political job in exchange for his support.

The name of every person contributing $100 or more would be published.

The bill provides that "reports shall be made by the national committees of all political parties, congressional campaign committees and all committees, associations or organizations of every nature, kind and description for whatever purpose created, organized or incorporated, or any subsidiary thereof, which shall in two or more states influence the result or attempt to influence the result of an election at which Representatives in Congress are to be elected."

What is regarded by advocates of the bill as a drastic provision, provides that every erson, firm, association, except political committees as already provided for, that shall expend or promise any sum of money or any other thing of value amounting to $50 or more, "for the purpose of influencing or controlling in two or more states, the result of an election of a Senator or eRpresentative, unless he or she shall contribute the same to a political committee, shall file a statement of the same under oath with the clerk of the House of Representatives."

It was explained that this would give publicity to individual contributions not made through political committees and would help to account for every dollar spent in any campaign.

Plan to Raise $500,000 Fund Explained to Harding.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Plans of the Republican National Committee to raise a campaign fund of $500,000 to create public sentiment favorable to the return of a Republican Congress in the November election were detailed to President Harding today by Fred W. Upham, treasurer of the National Committee.

Raising of such a campaign fund was finally decided on at the meeting here Thursday of a number of Republican leaders at the call of John T. Adams, chairman of the National Committee.

Upham said on leaving the White House today that the activity of the National Committee in the coming campaign would not be directed toward the election of individuals, but would be devoted to "getting before the people the real record of what has been done congressionally since 1920."

DWARF LIVES TO AGE OF 81

Maj. Louis Davis, 37 Inches Tall, to Be Buried in Circus Clothes.

By the Associated Press.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., June 10.—Maj. Louis Davis, 81, retired circus dwarf, died at his home in Granville, near here yesterday. For more than 50 years "Major" Davis traveled with Barnum & Bailey's, Ringling Bros. and Sells and Forepaugh's circuses as a side-show attraction. He was 37 inches in height.

A month ago "Major" Davis made all preparations for his death. Selecting the attending physician and undertaker, he chose the place where he desired to be buried and picked out the clothing in which he desired to be laid at rest, a beloved old "swallow-tail" suit, a relic from circus days. He paid all funeral expenses in advance. Ten days ago he suffered a paralytic stroke which resulted in his death.

PILLORY WINS $50,000 BELMONT STAKE RACE

Snob II, the Favorite, Runs Second and Hea Third.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Pillory, R. T. Wilson Jr.'s entry, won the $50,000 Belmont Stakes at Belmont Park this afternoon. Snob II finished second and Hea third.

Pillory, the Preakness winner, was third choice in the odds offered by bookmakers on the race. Snob II was the favorite and Hea also was picked to finish ahead of Pillory.

Pillory's time was just two seconds lower than the track record, 2:16 4-5. The result was a great surpise to horsemen, who had confidently expected Snob II, the colt for which J. S. Cosden recently paid $85,000, would win easily.

By the Associated Press.

TERRE HAUTE Ind. June 10.—Four men were injured in a disturbance today at the mine of the Kerns Coal Co. near here when a crowd of about 100 men appeared at the mine and demanded that miners at work there quit their jobs.

The crowd left the Kerns mine and marched to the Morris and Faulkner mine, at Riley, a short distance away, where the same demands were made of the workers. Threats to burn the mine and other outbursts caused owners to send a call to Terre Haute authorities for assistance. Sheriff A. A. Wolfe formed a posse, and accompanied by Davy Jones, a district official of the United Mine Workers of America, went to the scene of the disturbance. The marchers withdrew.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, June 10.—The half holiday hosts of fans arrived early this afternoon to see Urban Shocker match the best right arm in the American League against the bat of "Babe" Ruth, the greatest hitter of home runs that baseball has ever known.

An hour before game time the grand stands except for the reserve seats and boxes were packed with humanity. There were a few seats in the bleachers and the left field pavilion, but there were filling rapidly as game time approached.

The overflow crowd scrambled on the field at 2:15 filling the double row of temporary seats in front of each pavilion. More than 22,000 persons were out to see the opening game of the series with the leaders.

Fohl's men went into the series two and a half games out of first place.

Scott hit to Gerber, who threw wild to second. McManus recovered and threw past Ellerbe, Pipp scoring and Scott reaching third. Scott scored on Devormer's sacrifice fly to Jacobson. WASHINGTON, June 10.—Calvin Coolidge, Vice President and silent man of the administration, has just unbosomed himself of a thought which no one in the administration has thus far before him ventured to say in public, and which has aroused, as was inevitable, a great deal of comment whenever the League of Nations is mentioned.

The league has been for the most part tabooed as a subject of praise. Even a casual reference to it has been studiously avoided because of the sharp lines of difference in Congress. Mr. Coolidge, who presides over the Senate and listens to debate with fettered lips and suppressed desire, gives vent occasionally to h ideas in public addresses. He sits at the Cabinet table twice a week and it is reported that he has very little to say there. He is mostly a listener, but his meditations are none the less constant. And so the speech which the Vice President made at the graduation exercises of American University here this week was bound to attract attention, though it is fair to assume there was nothing deliberately significant about the making of it. Mr. Coolidge is too discreet to go about making indiscreet speeches.

Not Forgotten Pledge.

But Mr. Coolidge was an advocate of international co-operation before he was nominated for the vice presidency, and he kept on being an advocate of it during the presidential campaign of 1920, and it is a noteworthy fact that he believed in ratifying the Versailles treaty, including the league covenant with reservations. And now after a year and a half of silence on the part of the administration as to the pledge made in the campaign of 1920 for an association of nations, Mr. Coolidge indicate that he wishes the public to believe that the administration of which he is no unimportant spokesman has not forgotten that pledge. He said:

"The lessons of the great conflict have not gone unlearned.

"There is a general admission throughout the earth of a mutual relationship and a mutual responsibility. There is the League of Nations, which, whether it be successful or not, whether imperfections may be contained within its terms, is, at least, the attempted expression of a noble aspiration for world association and understanding."

This is the first public praise from a member of the Harding administration of the ideal which an American President sought to have his own country adopt. Then as it might be thought that Mr. Coolidge was lacking in praise for what Mr. Wilson's successor has done for international co-operation, Mr. Coolidge remarks briefly:

"The four-power treaty and the covenants of the limitation of armaments all are expressive of an even higher and nobler aspiration and an even firmer reliance upon reason as the foundation for all peace."

Except for Mr. Coolidge's speech there has been nothing from the administration to indicate whether the Association-of-nations idea is yet to be carried out by Mr. Harding, though sundry hints dropped in official quarters would give the impression that enough has been done in that direction by America through the recent Washington conference. The tendency of the administration is to praise the objectives and the ideals of international organizations without favoring American membership in what is characterized here as "rigid and formal institutions."

Hope for Wider Co-operation.

The failure of the Genoa conference was of course, regretted here, but it, like other European conferences, has done much to dampen the ardor of the present administration for even that small measure of international co-operation which a year ago it was thought sure would be vouchsafed by the President and Secretary of State without joining in any league or association of nations. Mr. Coolidge's speech is the first word of admiration for the League of Nations spoken in a long time and coming as it does at a time when there is a lull in American interest in European conferences, the utterance has been a source of encouragement to those who steadfastly believe Mr. Harding before the end of his administration will attempt co-operation with the powers of the world on broad European questions just as he did with those same powers on Asiatic and Pacific questions.

POLICY OF SECRECY AS TO CONDITION OF LENINE ADOPTED BY THE SOVIETS

By the Associated Press.

RIGA, June 10.

THE soviet legation here said last evening that no further announcement regarding Premier Lenine will be made at present as the latest accounts of his condition were good.

The various rumors regarding the illness of the soviet leader and the lack of news from soviet sources led the German-language newspaper Riga Review, to comment yesterday that it seems as if the Bolsheviki had begun to reckon on the possibility of Lenine's "departure."

"If Lenine dies, it is believed a serious struggle will occur within the council, where the extreme left will strive to tear the power from the moderates. This may lead to chaos and a relapse into the Government methods of the recent past."

ROBBERS GET $300 PAYROLL IN HOLDUP AT EAST ST. LOUIS

Three Armed Men Menace Office Force of Lumber Company—Escape in Auto.

Three men with revolvers held up the office force of the O'Neil Lumber Co., Fifteenth street and Lincoln avenue, East St. Louis, a few minutes before noon today, and took $300 payroll money from the cashier's desk. They escaped in an automobile in which a fourth man was waiting.

Joseph O'Neil, president of the company; L. G. Heintz, manager, and T. Tirmanstein, a clerk, were in the office when the robbers entered and put up their hands when commanded to do so. One of the robbers then stepped to the cashier's cage and took the money from the drawer.

Witnesses saw the automobile heading for the Collinsville road, several blocks north of the lumber company's office, and notified police. Chief Mulconnery and several policemen set out in automobiles for the Collinsville road.

ESCAPE FROM HANGING BEE IN 1908 IS RECALLED BY DEATH

Southerner Whose Friend Was Hanged Escaped From Rope by Jumping in Lake.

By the Associated Press.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 10.—The famous night riding campaign of 1908 in Obion, Lake and adjoining counties in West Tennessee, during which hundreds of citizens of that district banded together in opposition to a plan of Northern capitalists of making the Reelfoot Lake area of Tennessee into a vast private game preserve, is recalled by the death at his home in Trenton, Tenn., Friday, of Col. R. Z. Taylor, one of the central figures in the uprising.

In that year Col. Taylor and Capt. Quentin Rankin were taken from the hotel at Walnut in the preserve by the night riders. Capt. Rankin was hanged and a rope placed about Col. Taylor's neck. Although 62 years old, he broke away from his captors, dived into a lake and, although dozens of shots were fired at him, made his escape in the swamps. Eight members of the night riding band received death sentences, but the case was reversed by the Supreme Court and the men were never tried again. The hanging of Capt. Rankin caused the plan for the game preserve to be abandoned, and the State since has taken over part of the tract.

Col. Taylor died near the spot at Trenton where he was born in 1846.

$6,000,000 BOND ISSUE FOR BONUS DEFICIT PROPOSED

Submission of Constitutional Amendment for Purpose Will Be Suggested to Convention Next Week.

DETAILS OF PLAN YET TO BE WORKED OUT

J. C. Allison, New London, Proposes an Elective State Board of Equalization of Limited Power.

By a Staff Correspondent of The Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., June 10.—Submission of a constitutonal amendment to authorize the issuance of probably $6,000,000 more of bonds to meet the probable deficit in funds to pay the State soldier bonus will be proposed to the constitutional convention early next week by Henry Parks Lay of Warsaw.

Details of the proposal have not been worked out yet. Information for Lay's use, however, is being prepared by Adjutant General Raupp, chairman of the bonus committee.

An elective State Board of Equalization of 16 members whose authority would be limited to equalizing between classes of property and between the property of counties and which would be without power to increase the total assessment of property above the aggregate total certified to the State by the counties, is contemplated in a proposal to the constitutional convention.

James O. Allison of New London presented this plan yesterday. The present Board of Equalization is an ex-officio body composed of the Governor, Secretary of State, State Treasurer, State Auditor and Attorney-General. Allison would substitute for this a board with one member from each congressional district.

Another proposal, by E. N. Meader of Cassville, would empower the Legislature to classify intangible personal property separately for taxation and provide for their taxation at rates different from those on other personal property. He would further provide that all real estate and tangible personal property be taxed in proportion to their full market value. Meader also would make the State Tax Commission a constitutional body.

Minimum pay of $4.50 a day if working on that schedule or $100 a month if working by the month, would be provided for laborers employed by the State under a proposal by Dr. Alonzo Tubbs of Owensville of "anti-tipping bill" reputation. Dr. Tubbs said he had in mind the men working at actual labor around the State Capitol and State institutions.

Tubbs also presented a suggestion that the Legislature be restrained from prohibiting non-professional nursing, or from interfering with the activities of persons not holding State nursing licenses, but who desire to care for the sick and collect compensation therefor.

MILLIONAIRE SUES ACTRESS FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Miss Gladys Wells of Chicago Says John Roberts, Texas Oil Man, Pursued Her.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Reversing the customary code of love litigation, John R. Roberts, Texas rancher and oil man, whose wealth is reputed at $3,000,000, has filed the praecipe of a $50,000 breach of promise suit against Miss Gladys Wells, an actress, now living in Chicago.

Miss Wells said she finally accepted Roberts' attentions after he had followed her over the country.

"Because he presented me with furs and jewels, valued, he claimed, at $50,000, he said that I was his property," Miss Wells said.

"He was a friend of Jake Hamon before the latter was killed in Oklahoma, and it was a Jake Hamon case in every respect.

"I moved to Mexia, where he lived, and during two years there he used to hurl such words at me as: 'I bought your soul. You belong to me.' He demanded that I marry him and pestered me until I was frantic. I had to escape from him and I left six months ago, hiding like a fugitive.

"What he wants, I think, is to force me to marry him or return his gifts."

Roberts is said to have become wealthy overnight when oil was discovered on his ranch.

$294,235,000 IN NAVY BILL REPORTED TODAY

Net Increase of $42,965,000 Over House Bill but $131,251,000 Less Than Asked For.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Appropriations of $294,235,000 are made in the annual naval appropriation bill as reported out today by the Senate Appropriations Committee. This represents a net increase of $42,965,000 over the House bill, but $131,251,000 less than requested by the Navy Department.. The bill is to be called up next Monday.

Much less opposition than usual is anticipated in the Senate because of the committee's action in agreeing with the House to an enlisted personnel of 86,000 men and 19,500 marines. Senator King, Democrat, Utah, however, is expected to move to reduce the marine corps personnel to 10,000 men and to terminate marine operations in Haiti and Saato Domingo.

Principal Increases.

Principal increases in navy appropriations noted in the committee report were: Navy building, $10,000,000; new aircraft, $6,537,000; pay, $26,016,000; engineering, $2,695,000, and construction and repair of vessels, $2,000,000.

The bill entails a large reduction in naval expenditures, the appropriations for the present fiscal year being $425,486,000, or $119,000,000 more than the bill reported today.

Aviation Comparisons.

The bill carries no appropriations requested by the Navy Department for new Pacific Coast naval bases. The committee, however, authorized $687,500 increases for the Puget Sound and Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, navy yards.

Regarding the naval aviation increase, the committee said "the absolute independence of the air service as a branch of the naval warfare" had been demonstrated. The total aviation appropriations were $14,703,000 and the report said that $15,000,000 had been appropriated for the army air service, a total for both of $29,703,000, as compared with aviation budgets of $63,424,000 by Great Britain, $44,600,000 by France, and $18,723,000 by Japan.

WHY HOUSEWIFE PAYS MUCH AND FARMER GETS LITTLE TO BE TOLD

Agricultural Inquiry Joint Commission Is Preparing Information on Fruit and Vegetable Prices.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The housewife will be informed in a forthcoming report by the joint commission on agricultural inquiry why she pays so much for fruits and vegetables and the farmer informed why he gets so little.

Chairman Anderson of the commission said in a preliminary report that the investigation had about disposed of the constantly recurring popular myth "of wanton destruction of perishable produce in order to boost the price."

The commission's report will show, Anderson said, that two fundamentally different principles govern the prices to the producer—supply and demand and the principle of fixed charges. The sale price of fruits and vegetables, he added, was determined by the relation of supply to demand. Lack of proper terminal market facilities was found to be one reason for the wide spread between producers' and consumers' prices.

Five Safes Opened in One Building; $13 Stolen

Cracksmen Pry Combinations Off Five Strong Boxes at 1209 Washington Avenue but Obtain Only Few Dollars.

Cracksmen last night pried off the combination of five safes in the Lesser-Goldman Building at 1209 Washington avenue. They succeeded in getting three safes open and got only $13 for their laborous effort.

Outer combinations of four safes were knocked off, and the fifth safe, the outer door of which was already open, was found with the inner door knob broken off and the pass box broken open. Two of the safes were not entered, although the combinations and outer door had been broken open. One of the safes unopened contained $100 Liberty Bond and $128 in cash.

Offices entered were not equipped with burglar alarms, while other offices on each of the floors on which the robbers worked are so equipped. Police concluded the robberies were committed by persons familiar with the building.

Four of the safes were on the eighth floor, in a large room shared by five firms. The other safe was on the fifth floor. The firms are: The Supreme Hat Manufacturing Co., Baker Co., Leon E. Denison Co., Infants' Wear Co., and the Richardson Silk Co.

ROBBER SLAIN, MONEY STICKING OUT OF POCKET

Fred Roberts, Accused After Murder of Kansas City Society Girl, Shot.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 10.—Fred Roberts, known to the police and underworld as "Big Fred," because of his diminutive stature, was killed in a pistol fight with three policemen early today. Roberts was charged with murder following the killing of Miss Florence Barton, society girl here, shot to death on a lonely country road while driving with her fiance in October, 1920.

Roberts never was brought to trial and charges against him were dismissed following the acquittal of Dennie Chester, also charged with the crime.

Roberts' death followed an attempt to rob the King Coffee Co., according to the police. Notified that a robbery was in progress, the policemen went to the place. A man outside fired at them and fled, the patrolmen said, and Roberts was seen in the office rifling the safe. He fled by a back door and was shot while crawling through a fence. He died later in a hospital.

One hundred and seventy-four dollars in currency was found thrust half way into Roberts' pocket, according to the policemen.

Roberts was held for some time in St. Joseph, Mo., on charges of automobile stealing after the Barton murder.

NORTH AMERICAN COMPANY TO UNDERWRITE U. R. BONDS

Federal Judge Faris has directed Receiver Wells of the United Railways Co., to accept the proposition of the North American Co., to underwrite the bond issue of $1,640,000 on the Cass Avenue and Fairgrounds Railway, which matures July 1, as the better plan to have the issue extended 15 months, or until Oct. 1, 1923.

Receiver Wells recently submitted the North American Co.'s proposition, together with an alternative plan of issuing receiver's certificates as a means of raising funds to take up the issue. The North American Co. agreed to render the service for a fee equivalent to 6 per cent of the indebtedness.

Special Master Lamm, who considered both propositions, recommended the North American Co.'s plan as the more economical of the two, and Judge Faris, in issuing the order, stated that it had been his experience that the cost of issuing receiver's certificates was considerably in excess of 6 per cent of the amount involved.

Robbers Overlook $4990.

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., June 10.—Literally taking possession of the village of Low Point, 37 miles northeast of here by cutting telephone and telegraph wires in four directions, robbers made two hauls. The total loot amounted to $57. The amount of $4990, hidden in lod rags stuffed into the walls of one place was overlooked.

CURBY LEFT $632,410 BESIDES INSURANCE

Inventory of Manufacturer's Personalty Filed; Insurance Totaled $1,662,000.

Besides the insurance for $1,662,000 which the late Clarence J. Curby, vice president and general manager of the Smith & Davis Manufacturing Co., carried on his life, he left an estate of $632,410, as shown in the inventory, filed for probate today by Mrs. Rose Davidson Curby, widow and executrix.

The inventory lists Curby's personality as totaling $682,410, but this includes in the cash item $50,000 insurance which has been paid to the estate. The major portion of the insurance named his wife or the manufacturing company as beneficiaries, and consequently was not paid into the estate.

Items Listed in Inventory.

The following items are listed in the inventory: Stock in corporations, $463,792, including 1231 shares in the Smith & Davis company; bonds, $52,766; cash, $148,094, including the $50,000 insurance; chattels (furniture, etc.), $26,307; notes, $1097; accounts receivable, $358.

The Smith & Davis stock is listed at market value, which, at $327 a share, amounts to $438,467. Par is $100.

No real estate is listed in the inventory. Title to the Washington Terrace residence was held jointly by Mr. and Mrs. Curby and she became owner upon his death.

Entire Estate to Family.

Curby's will, which was drawn in 1912, left his entire estate to his wife and children, Ruth, 15 years old, and John, 11, except for a $5000 bequest to a sister-in-law, Naomi Davidson.

Most of Curby's insurance has been paid. Two months ago $1,220,000 of it had been paid. Much of it had been taken out in recent years and Curby was said to have been the most heavily insured person in St. Louis. He was 39 years old and was president of the Automobile Club of Missouri and an ardent hunter.

TRUE SERVED TERM IN U. S. FOR FORGERY

Reprieved British Slayer Was Sentenced to 15 Months in California Jail.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Maj. Ronald True, whose reprieve from the gallows for murder brought a storm of protest from the British press yesterday, claimed to be Lord de Freyne, stepson of Lord Glenfalloch of Scotland, when he served a 15 months' Federal sentence in the Alameda (Cal.) County jail in 1913 for forging stolen postal money orders.

British newspapers freely intimated that True was the son of one of the most noted gentlewomen of the English nobility, but True's identity has been withheld by the British authorities. He was tried for the murder of Gertrude Yates in London three weeks ago, and saved from hanging by commitment to a hospital for the criminal insane.

The facts of his conviction and sentence in Alameda were brought to light by William Madiera, postoffice inspector, who traced True on his flight from the Pacific coast to New Orleans, where he was arrested. Comparison of photographs completed the identification.

At the time of his conviction here he claimed right to the title of Hon. Arthur Reginald French, otherwise Lord de Freyne of French Park, County Roscommon, Ireland.

He was an adventurer and soldier of fortune, according to the officer who trailed him from here to New Orleans.

Condemnation by Press Follows Reprieve of True.

(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, June 10.—By reprieving Ronald True, sentenced to die next week, Home Secretary Short has incurred the condemnation of almost the entire press. Because of large sums spent in True's defense it is charged there is one justice for the poor and another for the rich.

This criticism gains point from the hanging Wednesday of Harold Jacoby, 18, murderer of Lady Alice White. The jury had recommended mercy in his case.

True, convicted of killing Gertrude Yates in her own apartment, is said to be the son of a wealthy noblewoman. The defense claimed True was mentally irresponsible as the result of an airplane crash in America, the story of which, taken from the New York World, was introduced.

The Home Secretary finally appointed a medical commission to examine True, and this commission decided the condemned man is insane.

MAN ACCUSED OF SENDING POISONED CANDY ACQUITTED

Jury Frees Harry Rolf, Alleged to Have Mailed Chemically Treated Sweets to Divorced Wife.

WOMAN TESTIFIES TO FREQUENT THREATS

Telephone Operator Says She Started to Eat Candy and That Her Mouth Was Severely Burned.

A jury in the United States District Court late yesterday acquitted Harry Rolf, 4213 Race Course avenue, of a charge of using the mails to send a box of poisoned candy to his divorced wife, Miss Laura Spies, an operator at the Lindell exchange of the Bell Telephone Co., shortly before last Christmas.

Members of the jury, after their discharge, said their verdict had resulted from a reasonable doubt that Rolf put the package containing the candy in the mail or that it was poisoned at the time it was received by the Postoffice authorities.

Rolf's divorced wife testified she frequently was annoyed by Rolf by letters in which he threatened her, and by threats he made on occasions when they met on the street. A number of letters, which Rolf admitted writing, were introduced in evidence and in one of them Rolf wrote: "We will both be out of this life soon. Be prepared."

Handwriting Expert Testifies.

She testified that Rolf had threatened her with a butcher knife while they lived at the Sterling apartments, 5316 Pershing avenue and that following her divorce he had threatened here with a revolver on the street, showing her the weapon and declaring, "I could get you now if I wanted to."

Gus V. R. Mechin, handwriting expert, testifying for the Government, examined the writing on all of the letters and post cards in evidence and on the box of candy, and said they were all written by the same hand. He was not cross-examined by counsel for Rolf.

Miss Ida Mittlinger, an operator employed with Miss Spies, said she started to eat a piece of candy shortly after the box was received by Miss Spies, and that it burned her mouth so severely she spat it out. Her mouth was sensitive for three weeks, she said. She identified the box in court.

Extends Hand to Judge.

Assistant City Chemist Mollendorf testified he made an analysis of the candy in the box and found the candied cherries contained corrosive sublimate. Other candies in the box did not contain poison.

In his own defense Rolf denied he had sent the candy. His attorney charged, in his argument to the jury, that the whole matter was a "frame up" on his client. He said there had been bad feeling between the two and that the charge against Rolf had been made in a revengeful spirit.

When the jury returned with its verdict, Rolf jumped from his seat and rushing to the bench extended his hand to Judge Faris. "I don't see why you want to shake hands with me," said the Judge. "I didn't help you. Thank the jury."

STUDENTS RETURNING FROM DANCE FIRED ON

Party Tells of Auto With Four Young Men Pursuing Them at 1:15 A. M.; 1 Wounded.

A party of High School students, seven youths and two girls, returning in an automobile from a dance at the Midland Valley Country Club today at 1:15 a. m., was pursued and overtaken by another automobile occupied by four young men, one of whom, after an altercation, fired three shots, slightly wounding Maurice Punch, 18 years old, son of Montague Punch, a lawyer residing at 2 Yale avenue, University City. Punch suffered a slight flesh wound in the right arm.

Young Punch said today at the city hospital that occupants of the pursuing car, which overtook them at Hodiamont and Bartmer avenues, charged them with speeding and compelled the driver of their car, David Owin, of 5333 Pershing avenue, to sign a paper, saying "You appear at Clayton tomorrow."

Pursuing Driver Identified.

One of the occupants of the pursuing car was George Seibert, 21, of 5970 Theodosia avenue, who told the police that he was chauffeur for Constable Juluis Schoenbein and that the car was that of the Constable. Constable Schoenbein said today that the car was not his, but belonged to Seibert, who, he said, sometimes acted as a volunteer relief driver for him without pay. He said that neither Seibert nor any of his companions was deputized or authorized to make arrests.

The other occupants of the students' car were William Wallace, 17, of 643 Hanley road; Louis Hoerr, 21, of 1381 Clara avenue; Gay Nelson, 18, of 3130 South Compton avenue, Misses Dorothy Foland, 19, of 68 Vandeventre place and Maxine Orthewein of 1827 South Compton avenue.

Besides George Seibert, in the other car were his brother, Fred, 17; Larry Fontana, 19, and his brother, Jerome, 20, of 4924 Berthold avenue. Larry Fontana admits firing three shots, but declares that he shot into the ground.

Story Told by Punch.

Punch's story was as follows: Neither he nor his companions were aware of any pursuit until an automobile drove up beside them near Hodiamont and Bartmer avenues, and a voice from the car said: "Stop there, what do you think this is, a race track?"

Their car had been traveling at a smart speed and he and his companion had no doubt that the men in the other car were officers, a belief that was confirmed, he said, when one of them drew a paper and compelled Owen to sign. He said the men then went back toward their car, but one lingered and cursed them.

Punch said that he demanded that the youth apologize because of the presence of the girls. The youth swung his fist, missing, and Punch said he countered and landed. The youth in the pursuers' car alighted and joined in, Punch said, and in the melee, three shots were fired.

Seibert and his companions said that they were driving into the county, when they were forced to the side of the road by a speeding automobile, which they turned and followed five miles into the city before they could overtake it. They declared the students started the fight.

A warrant charging assault with intent to kill was issued today in the Circuit Attorney's office against Larry Fontana. A second weapon was found in his companion's car and the police sought warrants charging carrying concealed weapons. These were refused and the police were advised to charge general peace disturbance.

YEARLY SONG FEST HELD BY OZARK COMMUNITY

Century-Old Tunes Are Sung in Cedar Fringed Mountain Gap First Sunday in June.

By the Associated Press.

CEDAR GAP, Mo., June 10.—On the first Sunday in June Cedar Gap, just a small Ozark mountain village, gathers at a mountain gap lined with cedar trees and sings away the day. An entire day devoted to singing is observed every year and of late the town has trebled its population on this day with the large number of visitors who come from miles around for the singing.

The highest point along the line of the only railroad, where all the trains halt for water, coal and orders, Cedar Gap is a home of families banded together, hardly more than 100 souls. It claims no fame, but it does date all events from one singing festival to another. Southwestern Wright County dates events in the same manner.

First Was 34 Years Ago.

Thirty-four years ago the first song was sung, lasting until day faded into twilight. Syria Odle, a singer of the old school, was one of the men who started the singing. He with other men and women from nearby rural districts, moved to the mountain gap of cedars with the coming of the railroad. At irregular intervals the groups of men, singing for hours at a time, gathered and, with the coming of June, 1889, there came the idea of making one of the singing festivals an annual institution. It was done.

The next year the day happened to be Sunday, the first Sabbath of the first summer month. That date has been retained from year to year.

"Songbird of the Ozarks."

Syria Odle became known as the "songbird of the Ozarks." He had conducted singing for 65 years in the community, using the same books as were used several days ago when the thirty-fourth annual all-day singing was celebrated. Thirteen months ago he died in his seventy-ninth year, only a few days before he had been hoping to conduct another Cedar Gap singoig.

Three thousand persons came to the Gap this June to hear the singing. There was no music other than the voices of those taking part in the festival, although an organ and a piano stood in the church whence the melodies issued. Paris Odle, son of Syria, conducted. The leader used no tuning fork, but caught the notes in a natural voice, which the others followed. The tunes were a century old.

LIGHTNING STRIKES MINE TIPPLE

During a thunderstorm at noon Thursday lightning struck the tipple of the Pittsburg mine, a mile north of Belleville, causing this to catch fire. The tipple was burned to the ground, entailing a loss of $6000. The mine is the property of the Perry Coal Co. and has been closed since April 1.

Lightning also struck a locust tree on the Herman Ross farm, a mile south of Belleville, killing 15 sparrows roosting there and stunning Ross, who was at work in a field nearby. No damage was done to the tree, but a post at the far end of a metal clothes line attached to the tree was shattered.

Vaudeville Feature Cancels Engagement.

The Southland Follies, a musical vaudeville feature, booked to play at the Missouri Theater the week starting today, has canceled its engagement on account of the controversy between the motion picture theater managers and the union musicians of St. Louis. A similar situation occurred several weeks ago when the Isham Jones Orchestra failed to fill an engagement at the New Grand Central as a result of the same dispute.

ATTORNEY AWARDED $7000 IN SUIT FOR FEE

Jury Returns Verdict in Case of Henry W. Blodgett Against Henry C. Koenig.

A verdict for $7000 was returned by a Circuit Court jury this afternoon in favor of Henry W. Blodgett, an attorney, who was suing Henry C. Koenig of 3836 Kosciusko street, wealthy brick manufacturer, for $15,000 as his fee for having successfully defended him from a charge under the espionage act during the war.

With interest from November, 1918, the total award was $8525.23. Blodget testified he worked 100 days, eight hours a day on the case.

Koenig was indicted on 10 counts. He was charged with saying that the Red Cross and Y. M. C. A. organizations were managed by dishonest persons and he would not contribute to them, also that former President Wilson was pro-English and more aristocratic than the Kaiser, that German U-boats had a right to sink our merchant ships and that he was sorry for American soldiers who were sent across to fight Germany as they would not return; also that his first duty was to the land of his parents. He was acquitted by order of Judge Munger on Nov. 12, 1918, following armistice day.

Koenig testified he did not know Blodgett was one of his lawyers until he read in the Post-Dispatch that the lawyer had argued a demurrer to the indictment. "When I inquired about Blodgett," Koenig said, "Frumberg informed me I would have nothing to do with paying him, that he had taken him in the case for effect and the fee would be paid by him. I agreed to pay Frumberg $7500 and have paid him in full."

Blodgett testified that Koenig said unless he was acquitted he would kill himself, that money was no object as he was worth more than a million dollars and had property all over town and that he would pay a fee of $15,000 in addition to a fee of $25,000 he had promised to the law firm of Frumberg & Russell. Frumberg corroborated Blodgett's statement. He also said he had not been paid in full for his services.

Several lawyers testified in behalf of Blodgett that a fee of $15,000 was reasonable. John S. Leahy put it as high as $20,000, saying it was amazing, in view of the charges, that Koenig was not convicted. C. Orrick Bishop and John A. Blevins, attorneys, testified for the defense. Bishop said $5000 would be enough, while Blevins fixed the amount at $8000, or $10 an hour.

CITY FILES ANSWER TO NEGRO'S SUIT TO PLAY ON WHITE LINKS

Says Refusal of Permit Is Not Arbitrary, But Is in Accord With Custom.

In the city's answer to a mandamus suit brought by Albert H. Howard, a negro, to compel Park Commissioner Pape to issue him a permit to play golf in Forest Park, filed in Circuit Judge Hall's Court today, it is pointed out that the Park Commissioner has the right to discriminate as to who shall use the various park facilities.

The following restrictions were mentioned: Adults from the playgrounds, older children from wading pools, use of swimming pools for women only at certain times and privilege of the picnic grounds to various groups.

It was pointed out that the city is willing to provide separate golf facilities for negroes equal to those for whites when a sufficient number of negroes express a desire for them, but that only five negroes have ever sought golf permits. The refusal to issue a permit to Howard was not arbitrary, but in accord with custom, it was declared. The answer made this statement:

"The use of the same swimming and wading pools, tennis courts and golf links by negroes and whites would not tend to promote the public welfare and pleasure, but would cause great dissatisfaction and lead to public disorder."

VICTORY OVER PINCHOT FACTION

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—The regular organization forces of the Republican party in Pennsylvania won a victory over the supporters of Gifford Pinchot, Republican candidate for Governor, today, when they elected W. United States Senator George Wharton Pepper was elected Pennsylvania's member of the Republican National Committee to succeed the late Senator Penrose. The choice was unanimous.

"SECRET OF HONOR" IN HUSBAND'S SLAYING

Novelist, Accused of His Murder, Refuses to Answer Questions Concerning 'Family Skeleton.'

(Copyright, 1922, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.)

Post-Dispatch Bureau, 47 Avenue de L'Opera.

PARIS, June 10.—A family "skeleton in the cupboard"—a secret involving her honor—was the reason invoked yesterday by Mme. Bessarabo, the novelist, for not replying to the Judge's questions relative to the murder of her husband, of which she and her daughter, Pauline Jacques, are accused.

After sternly enjoining the mother to choose her version of the tragedy and abide by it, the Judge appealed to her to explain how her husband's body was conveyed to Nancy in a trunk.

Mme. Bessarabo asserted when she sent the trunk from Gare du Nord it was full of documents. She would not offer any explanation of how the exchange was accomplished during the journey.

The Judge then repeated his same questions to the daughter, but the latter only stammered between fits of sobbing that she knew nothing.

"Your mother is quoted as saying to you the trunk must be sent away as far as possible," said the Judge. "How do you explain this?"

"I can't answer; it's a secret," was the answer. "The secret isn't mine; it is my mother's."

"Yes," broke in Mme. Bessarabo, "the secret involves a question of honor I cannot reveal."

It seemed at this moment as thought the girl was about to speak, but her mother shrieked in Spanish:

"I forbid. Be sident."

This was followed by her appeal to the jury to "have pity on two unhappy French women and do not insist on piercing their horrible secret."

PLAN MAKES POSSIBLE CASHING OF PAYROLL CHECKS ANYWHERE

Back of Check Bears Receipt for Wages, With Signature of Payee for Identification.

A method of paying off employes by check to avoid payroll robberies, which will enable the employes to have their checks cashed without the necessity of delay because of lack of identification, has been devised.

The back of the check bears a receipt for wages, under which the employe, in the presence of the paymaster, signs his or her name. When the check is presented at a bank or store, the employe simply writes his or her signature beneath the receipt, and comparison of the two signatures determines the identification.

Although the plan was devised by the Security National Bank, which got the idea from the travelers' check plan of the American Bankers Association, the check used by the American Express Co. and other "self-identifying" checks, any bank or company is at liberty to use it.

The use of the new check, it was explained, will eliminate the objection to paying off by check because heretofore employes have had trouble establishing their identity in order to have their checks cashed Signing the wage receipt on the back of the check will be equivalent to signing the payroll, as is customary when wages are paid in cash.

WHISKY SHIPMENT ORDERED RELEASED

Liquor, Shipped From Canada, Should Not Have Been Seized, Nations Is Told.

A consignment of 160 cases of bonded whisky, en route from Canado to Mexico, seized yesterday in St. Louis by Federal Prohibition Agent Nations, should not have been interfered with. This was the ruling today by the law division of the prohibition enforcement unit at Washington, to which Prohibition Commissioner Haynes referred an inquiry as to the legality of the seizure, and Nations was ordered to permit the shipment to proceed to its destination.

The enforcement unit, it was said, had ruled that international shipments of liquor passing through the United States shall not be liable to seizure if they enter this country before next Thursday. After that date the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, putting such shipments on the same basis as interstate consignments, will be operative.

The consignment, shipped from a point in Canada to Mexico, was accepted at the port of Detroit by customs inspectors and passed. It was then shipped on the Wabash road to St. Louis and was to have been transferred here to the Cotton Belt Line, which was to have carried it to Nogales, Ariz., whence it was to have ben exported to Mexico.

Officials of the Cotton Belt, in view of the Supreme Court's ruling, notified Nations of the arrival and, although he had received notice from Washington that such shipments were to be confiscated on and after June 15, he decided he had better seize the whisky and wire to Washington for instructions. The bill of lading valued the whisky at $3 a gallon, or a total of $1540.

REPUTED VIVISECTION PLAN OF SOCIETY CAUSES PROTEST

Physicians Tell Mayor of Rumored Proposal to Contest Recently Enacted Vivisection Ordinance.

A committee of physicians, including Health Commissioner Starkloff, President A. H. Hamel of the Missouri State Medical Association, and President W. W. Graves of the St. Louis Medical Society, today informed Mayor Kiel that the Humane Society is planning steps to contest the recently enacted ordinance permitting the use of dogs in medical schools for vivisection.

The Mayor assured them that if the ordinance was not carried out, officials at the dog pound would be removed, and persons who would obey the ordinance would be substituted.

Douglas W. Robert, counsel for the Humane Society, expressed surprise when told of the physicians' visit to the city hall. He said he had suggested to the Health Commissioner an amendment to the ordinance requiring that the dogs used in vivisection be given a drug after the operation so that their death might be painless. He said it was his impression that Dr. Starkloff had agreed to such an amendment.

MYSTERY MARKS $5000 FIRE

Restaurant, Scene of Labor Troubles in Last Five Years, Damaged.

Fire in the kitchen of the Gem Restaurant, 708-10 Pine street, at 3:05 a. m. today, caused damage estimated at $2000 to the cafe and $2000 to the building. The St. Louis Blue Print & Supply Co., occupying the second floor, was damaged $1500.

At the time the fire was discovered an employe was cleaning up in the front part of the place. He told the police there was no fire in the kitchen stoves or any place in the kitchen when he passed through a few minutes before smoke burst in the main part of the restaurant. The Gem has been the scene of considerable labor troubles in the last five years.

FATAL SHOOTING END TO FORGOTTEN ERRAND

One Fisherman Dead, Other Wounded After Lattr Fails to Bring Can of Oil.

A forgotten errand was source of a quarrel between two fishermen near the mouth of the Missouri River yesterday that ended in the fatal shooting of Fred Gels, 29 years old, and the wounding of John Meier, 37, who is a prisoner in Clayton charged with Gels' death. Meier was hit in the arm and right side.

Conflicting stories of the incidents of the shooting are told by Meier and Gels' wife, but both agree that the cause was Meier's failure to bring Gels a can of kerosense from St. Louis. Meier said that Gels came to his house, cursed him and opened fire on him with a shotgun, whereupon he ran into his house, obtained an automatic pistol and fired about 10 shots at Gels. Meier then drove in a Ford truck to the Angelica Street Police Station and surrendered.

Mrs. Gels said that Meier came to their home and said to her husband: "I am going to kill you," and exhibited a pistol. She said her husband replied: "Well, drop that pistol and let's fight it out like men with our fists." "Afraid to die," she said Meier jeered and opened fire. She said her husband was wounded four times. She denied that he fired at Meier and said that he did not take his shotgun from the house.

FARES ON WATERWORKS LINE ARE INCREASED TO 5 CENTS

An increase in fares on the Water Works Railway, operated by the Water Division between the end of the U. R. carline on North Broadway and Chain of Rocks, was ordered yesterday by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment. The new fare schedule is 5 cents for adults and 3 cents for children less than 12 years of age and is effective July 1. Fares of 6 cents and 3 cents had been proposed.

The old cash fare was 5 cents for adults and 2 cents for children, but the majority of the passengers used tickets sold to adults eight for 25 cents and to children 16 for 25 cents.

The increase was based on a report by Water Commissioner Wall that the line was being operated with an annual deficit of about $25,000. His report showed operating expenses during the year ending April 1, 1922, totaled $50,333.47. During that period 490,213 passengers paid fares and the cost of carrying each passenger, including Water Division employes on passes, was a fraction less than 8 cents.

Mayor Kiel opposed increasing the fare to 6 cents on the ground that it would be inconsistent in the city to make that large an increase in the face of efforts being made to bring about a reduction in fares charged by the United Railways Co. The 5 and 3 cent schedule was unanimously approved.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment was empowered to order the Water Works Railway fare increased without further legal action, as the fare is not fixed by ordinance.

COAL PRICE ULTIMATUM FROM WALSH TO SECRETARY HOOVER

Senator Says Indictment of Some Operators Will Result Unless Reductions Come "in Few Days."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, in a statement today, declared that a congressional investigation would be made and indictment of bituminous coal operators who have used the Hoover price-fixing agreement to raise prices would be demanded, unless Secretary Hoover obtains reductions of prices on contract coal "in a few days."

WOMAN HELD ON CHARGE OF KILLING HUSBAND

Mrs. Nellie Thompson, Under Indictment at Salem, Mo., Arrested in Colorado.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., June 10.—Mrs. Nellie Thompson was arrested at Keota, Colo., yesterday on charges connected with the death of her husband, Floyd Thompson, in Salem, Mo., Aug. 8, 1921, according to a dispatch to the Rocky Mountain News. She was put in the county jail at Greeley, Colo., to await the arrival of officers from Missouri and will not resist extradition, according to the dispatch.

Mrs. Thompson is quoted as saying that her husband killed himself, his body having been found in the hall of their home. He had been shot. She was arrested at the time of his death, but later was released and came to Colorado to live with her brother, says the dispatch.

Indictment Against Mrs. Thompson and Others Returned in April.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SALEM, Mo., June 10.—April 24 last the Dent County grand jury returned indictments charging murder in the first degree against Mrs. Nellie Thompson, "Jim Bob" Martin, Bird Kinserlow and Mrs. Cora Kinserlow, his wife, in connection with the death of Floyd Thompson.

Thompson, who was a tiecutter and a farmer on a small scale, was found shot to death at his home about four miles from the hamlet of Montauk, 20 miles south of Salem, Aug. 6, 1921. A bullet had entered his side. The theory of suicide was advanced, but certain circumstances caused the Coroner's jury to return a verdict of homicide by parties unknown. The Prosecuting Attorney did not press the case at the time.

Mrs. Thompson, the slain man's widow, was traced through "Jim Bob" Martin, said to have been a former sweetheart. She was living in Greeley, Colo. Sheriff William Schaefer expects to leave today for Greeley, to bring her back for trial.

The four defendants, it is understood, will stand trial at the August term of the Circuit Court here.

Martin and Kinserlow are in jail here. Mrs. Cora Kinserlow, who has a young bay, is at liberty in custody of the Sheriff. She is about 35 years old and her husband was 40. Testimony at the inquest was to the effect that there had been a card game in a house near the Thompson dwelling, that Thompson was killed at the game and his body was placed in his own house, where it was found.

By Herman Wecke,

PHILADELPHIA, June 10.—Jess Haines' great pitching and Austin McHenry's long distance clubbing gave the Cardinals a 5-1 victory in the second game of the series here today.

Haines yielded only 6 safeties, while the outfielder pounded out two homers.

All the Cardinal runs came off Southpaw Weinert. Winters hurled the final round for Wilhelm.

Hornsby's triple and a drive into the center field bleachers by McHenry gave the Rickeymen two in the third after two were out.

Stock's singl, a wild pitch and Ainsmith's safety gave the Cardinals another in the sixth.

Two more for the Rickeymen came in the eighth on McHenry's second homer of the game, Stock's double and Ainsmith's single.

Lavan's error in the ninth robbed Haines of a shutout.

This Will Face Leonard June 26

JACK BRITTON.

William J. Breslin, better known as Jack Britton, who will be 37 years old next October, has been matched to meet Leonard this month, in the first of three title fights which Leonard will undertake. Leonard is seeki Breslin's welterweight title, and the bout will go 15 rounds to a decision, at th Velodrome, New York City—provided it does not end in a knockout.

There is scant reason to believe there will be a decisive result other than a decision after the limit has been reached. Britton is not a knockerout, he is a safety first fighter. Britton's knockout of Ted Lewis at the age of 35 was perhaps the most surprising feature of his entire career. Previously he had fought Lewis 15 or 16 times without a decisive finish. Britton does not take a chance unless the enemy is tiring or careless.

Leonard is a younger man, just as clever, more daring and may possibly be able to break through the Brit n safety armor; but it is more than dubious. The men have boxed two bouts, one of 10 and one of six ounds without ruffling one another's hair.

Leonard must be given credit for going out of his classs to meet a dangerous fighter. Conceding a class in weight is a hazardous proceeding even for the best of fighters. Johnny Kilbane tried it with Leonard himself—and clever and hard-hitting though he is, Leonard flattened him quickly. The difference in weights may again tell the story.

Wolff in Front, One Up After 18 Holes in Final

Manion Starts With Lead of 5 in First Six Holes of District Golf Championship.

By Joseph F. Holiand,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

BELLERIVE COUNTRY CLUB, June 10.

Clarence Wolff of Sunset Hill was leading Jimmy Manion of Midland Valley, 1 up at the close of the morning round of 18 holes, in the district golf championship final. Manion had a medal round of 36-36—72, par; Wolff, 38-33—71, or one under par.

Manion played wonderful golf at the start and had a lead of 5 at Hole No. 6; Wolff played almost super golf to pull out and take the lead in the last nine holes.

The men started at about 10 o'clock, with a gallery of 100 or more following the contest. The gallery was augmented steadily as play progressed.

Both Men Play Great Game.

The morning round was truly remarkable. After Manion had won five of the first six holes, Wolff about faced and won five straight holes, which sent them to the 12 tee all square. Wolff then continued his prenomenal play. Here are some of the things he accomplished:

Won eight out of the last 12 holes. Manion won two and two were halved.

Finished the last nine holes 2 under par.

Played in par or better from the 6 to the 17 holes inclusive.

Included in this run were five birdies.

Played the entire round 1 under par, despite having some bad luck in the first six holes.

Holed a 25-foot for a "birdie" on No 14.

Manion played almost equally good golf. His round was exactly par for the course. He was in trouble but twice—remarkable recoveries saved him. On No. 16 Manion made a 35-foot putt for an "eagle" 4.

Trophy Situation Tangled.

When the District Association met this year to discuss trophies, it finally awoke to the fact that the cup which it had been awarding for the last seven years was rightfully retired from competition by Christian Kenney, Sunset Hill, four years ago.

Kenney should have taken the cup at that time, having won it by a victory in the tournament on three occasions. Through some fell circumstance he failed to claim it, and the names of Clarence Wolff, winner in 1919, and Richard Bockenkamp, 1920-21 victor, were engraved upon it.

Dr. Willis Hall, president of the association, said last night that an individual trophy cup would be presented to the winner as usual, but said that the coveted three-time cup had finally been awarded to Kenney.

Three other matches are to be played today in addition to the championship affair. Louis J. Hamel, the Forest Park Club star, will play L. C. Smith, Midland Valley, for the title in the championship consolation class. Guy Oliver and A. P. Briggs will play for the championship of Class "A," and Sterling E. Edmunds and F. J. Fitzgibbons will contend for the Class "B" supremacy.

Six strokes separated the first three of seven teams which participated in the inter-club play yesterday. Sunset won with 307, Algonquin was second with 311, and Forest Park third, 313. Midland Valley with Bockenkamp and Manion playing, was fourth with 320.

"Reb" Russell of Minneapolis, with Krueger of Indianapolis, and Becker of Kansas City, are shooting at the home run leadership, with the prospects of overcoming Bunny Brief's mark of 14. ## Carpentier Turns Down Greb Offer

French Champion Forced to Decline $1500,00; Has Matches Abroad.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Georges Carpentier will not defend his title of light heavyweight champion against Harry Greb in the near future. Promoter Tex Rickard, who recently cabled two offers to Carpentier to meet Greb here during the summer or fall, today received the following reply from Manager Desamps:

"Thanks for handsome offer which arrived too late; already signed to meet Milles in Paris in September and Deckett in London in October."

BRITISH RAISE FUND TO SEND 12-MAN TEAM AFTER U. S. GOLF TITLE

NEW YORK, June 10.—Bringing word that British golfers already had raised $10,000 to defray the expenses of sending a team of leading players to compete in the United States amateur championship at Brookline, Mass., in September, John G. Anderson of Siwanoy returned today from England on the liner Aquitania.

According to Anderson, the Britons plan to send a team of 12 captained by A. N. Hambre of London, and including Ernest W. Holderness, winner of the recent championship at Prestwick; John Caven, runnerup; Harold Hilton and Cyril Tolley, former champions.

SPEAKER, SICK, NOT TO ATTEND DUNN FUNERAL

CLEVELAND, O., June 10.—Tris Speaker, manager of the Cleveland Indians, is one of the saddest men in the country today. Confined to his bed in a local hotel with bronchitis, which for a time threatened to develop into pneumonia, Speaker is unable to attend the funeral of his best friend, James C. Dunn, president of the Cleveland club, in Marshalltown, Ia., tomorrow.

"Jim Dunn was a pattern of baseball magnate that exemplifies all that a manager wants in the owner he works for," was the tribute paid by Speaker.

Plans are under way to raise a fund for a memorial to Mr. Dunn. It probably will be erected at Dunn Field, the home of the Cleveland team.

The death of Mr. Dunn brought grief to thousands of school children. For several seasons it had been the policy of the dead magnate to admit several thousand free to games played on week days. The Indians will wear black bands of mourning on their left sleeves out of respect to Mr. Dunn.

MLLE. LENGLEN EASILY RETAINS TENNIS TITLE

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 10.—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen successfully defended her title as women's singles tennis champion of France today by defeating Mme. Golding, the challenger, 6—4, 6—0, in the concluding match of the French hard court championships.

Cochet, France's youthful tennis wonder, wrested the men's singles championship from Jean Sumazeuilh, 8—6, 8—3 and 7—5. Sumazeuilh, won the title from Andre Gobert last year.

Mme. Lenglen will take a complete rest until she leaves for the International tournament at Wimbledon, England, next Saturday.

England Not Looking for Bout Between Jack Dempsey and Wills, Declares London Scribe

The "Boxing Major" Calls Reports of Such a Fight Ridiculous; Says Public Is Opposed to Meeting Between Champion and Negro.

With talk of a championship match between Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland, O., and either Arthur Wyns, European champion, or Eugene Criqui, French champion, in the air, the following from the well-known boxing critic of London, "Boxing Major," will be interesting to the American fans.

"Arthur Wyns, featherweight champion of Europe, got the surprise of his life at the Liverpool Stadium when he lost the decision on points after 15 rounds of hard battling against Billy Matthews of London. Matched at 126 pounds, both boys weighed in under the poundage, but it was manifest that the Belgian had not excited himself in the matter of training, and paid the penalty that is sometimes exacted from champions who underestimate their opponets.

"The Belgian's next engagement is with Mick McAdam of Scotland, at 128 pounds, for a side bet of $500 and a purse. Unless Wyns profits by his experience, he is likely to be beaten again, for the Scot is one of the best featherweights in the country, and will probably be the next one to box Joe Fox for the British title. Fox has an engagement with Eugene Criqui of France, which is a disurbing one for both boxers. Failure by the French boy will effectually eliminate him from cossideration for the European title which is officially held by Wyns.

"The Boxing Club de France is contemplating a Wyns-Criqui clash for Paris on June 24, the eve of the race for the Grand Prix, the greatest horse race in France. Defeat by Fox would naturally upset the Paris Club's plans and in all probability the Britisher would be offered the chance of grabbing the title from Wyns. Another Paris club is dickering for a match between Marcel Nilles and George Cook on the same date, which would be bad policy. Two bouts of this class on the same night would spell financial loss for both promoting clubs.

Many Tales About Dempsey.

"Still more Dempsey fight stories are being circulated. The latest credits a London syndicate with a Dempsey-Bombardier Wells affair as definitely signed and scaled. As the world's champion is in America by now I cannot get the dope from him but Wells is entirely ignorant of any such contract. It would be positively wicked to match the Britisher with Dempsey under any rules or conditions, even more so than a return Carpentier battle. Wells in his recent clash with Albert Lloyd revealed that he has not lost his wonderful boxing skill, nor has he suffered in speed, but he displayed all his old faults, and though he might easily regain the British title from the funerally slow Joe Beckett, and possibly reverse those appalling defeats at the hands of Carpentier, no one who wishes him well wants to see Wells in the ring for a title battle with Dempsey.

"Still more ridiculous is the called report from New York of an offer by a British syndicate to promote a Dempsey-Harry Wills affair in this country. The report states that Dempsey is agreable to big concessions in the size of the purse, but Wills and Dempsey will not box together in this country, judging from the way the public feels about it.

"Joe Beckett, realizing his limitations, seems to have abandoned his dreams of a world's title battle, dreams that were encouraged by the old-timer, Jack McAuliffe, who was over here awhile ago. As matters stand, Beckett is our best heavyweight and likely to remain so for some time to come unless Wells again gets back into the front rank. The lanky Bombardier is satisfied to go slowly in his climb up the ladder of fame and is tackling a bunch of more or less easy marks as a preparation. Frank Goddard ought to be very soft and then will follow bouts with Marcel Nilles and possibly Dick Smith. The latter may be selected as an opponent for Beckett if the champion wishes for an opportunity to box for a Lonsdale belt. These trophies have a peculiar attraction for the majority of our boxers, and though they have signally failed to accomplish their original purpose, they still bring together the best we have for the title battles.

Fight Was a Fiasco.

"The Carp-Lewis scrap proved an awful fiasco except from Mal Wilson's point of view—financially. One can hardly say that Lewis was outclassed—there was not enough boxing for that—but he was far too light to contend with a hard-hitting, brainy fighter that the Frenchman is. Carpentier was only just inside the 'cruiser' limit, 175 pounds stripped, while Lewis, fully clothed, only scaled 157 pounds, so that he could have been very little over wekerweight, if at all.

"It was an ugly fight to watch, Lewis boxing as he said he would. The referee had a hard job to part them, so tightly did the Jew boy hang on. I expect there will be the usual controversy over the K. O. punch, which was perfectly legitimate. A boxer, I take it, is expected to defend himself at all times after the sound of the gong, and though Carp caught Lewis off his guard, Lewis himself scored a hefty punch on the mouth in an earlier breakaway, causing Carp to bleed freely.

"Lewis was beaten at his own game and I cannot see anyone here seriously entertaining a return match."

Barnstorming Ban Recommended by National League

Directors Uphold Rule That Caused the Suspension of the Bambino.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Seven National League directors—Pittsburg was not represented—in session here yesterday voted to recommend the retention of the rule which caused the suspension of Babe Ruth and Bob Meusel until May 20 of the current season. This rule requires both world's series contestaing teams to disband after the season and prohibits the players from competing in barnstorming exhibitions.

"Thorough consideration was given the proposition to change the world's series rules," says an official statement, "which requires both participating teams to disband immediately after the series. It was held that the present rule is a good one and should be retained."

Rule Called "Unfair."

When Ruth, Bob Meusel and Bill Piercy of the New York Americans, the latter now with Boston, went on an exhibition tour last October, they said they were justified because the rule was "unfair." Some considered it obsolete and others believed that Commissioner Landis was making a strict interpretation of a resurrected law in suspending the three players.

During the winter and spring a movement to repeal the rule was begun. Little public argument was made against it, and most fans believed that it would be erased from the books at league meetings later, today's decision coming as a distinct surprise. Representatives of all but the Pittsburg club attended the meeting. The statement did not say if the action was unanimous.

President John L. Heydler, who presided, was appointed a committee of one to carry out the league's plans in obtaining a site and erecting a "fitting memorial in memory of the late Capt. Adrian C. Anson, who died in Chicago this spring. Anson is recognized as the "daddy of baseball."

A resolution expressing regret over the retirement of James J. Jones from the St. Louis club and tendering him a vote of thanks was adopted, declaring that Mr. Jones' untiring effort, sound judgment and courage were in a great measure responsible for those practical reforms in baseball which gained the hearty approval of all supporters of the game. Further, "in recognition of his services," Mr. Jones was made a "life member."

Sisler Continues To Show the Way To A. L. Batsmen

Fast Brownie Also Is Running Away With the World's Base-Stealing Title.

With warmer weather and more work, the major league pitchers are hitting their stride with the result that the sluggers are finding it harder every day to get the ball into safe territory. This is shown by the steady shrinkage during the past week or two in the batting averages of such hitters as George Sisler, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Rogers Hornsby and others.

The youngsters who set the league afire in the first weeks of the season with .450 marks now are getting back to their normal averages of .275, while Sisler and the others, dropping more slowly than the flash-in-the-pan batters, still are rapidly getting down to their usual records.

Sisler still tops the American League batters today, despite a drop from .25 last week to .419 this week, the latter) mark including games of last Wednesday. With his 23 stolen bases, Sisler is far in front of his rivals on the paths, his closest competitor being Kenneth Williams, who has pilfered 17 bases.

Williams Still in Front.

The late start and slow progress made by "Babe" Ruth, the king of swat, to retain his honors, has encouraged other players to enter the competition in the hope of topping the "Babe." Ken. Williams of St. Louis bagged another homer, bringing his string to 14. Ruth has three. Ed Miller of Philadelphia is trailing Williams with 12; Harry Heilmann of Detroit and C. Walker of Philadelphia have eight apiece, while Baker of New York, Judge of Washington and Falk of Chicago have entered the contest with seven each.

Other leading batters for 25 or more games: Stephenson, Cleveland, .416; Ed Miller, Philadelphia, .385; Witt, New York, .372; Coleb, Detroit, .370; Speaker, Cleveland, .369; O'Neil, Cleveland, .364; Schang, New York, .347; Heilmann, Detroit, .339; Bessler, Detroit, .336; Blue, Detroit, .331; McManus, St. Louis, .330; Severeid, St. Louis, .328.

Gowdy Heads National.

First in war, first in batting. This is the honor which has fallen to Hank Gowdy of the Boston Braves, the first major league player to enlist in the war. Today, he is leading the batters of the National League with an average of .384, Gowdy is nine points ahead of Bigbee of Pittsburg and Hargrave of Cincinnati, who are tied with .375, for the runner-up honors. Hornsby of St. Louis, and T. Griffith of Brooklyn, are trailing for third place honors with averages of .374 each.

Max Carey of Pittsburg continues to lose the base stealers with 10. Other leading batters for 25 or more games:

R. Griffith, Brooklyn, .371; Daubert, Cincinnati, .362; Kelly, New York, .360; Ghimes, Chicago, .349; Southworth, Boston, .341; Snyder, New York, .340; Maranville, Pittsburg, .339; Myers, Brooklyn, .337; Duncan, Cincinnati, .333; Groh, New York, .333; J. Johnston, Brooklyn, .333; Bancroft, New York, .330; Holocher, Chicago, .326.

NATIONAL LEAGUE TO PENSION CAL McVEY

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 10.—Cal A. McVey halted in his rounds as night watchman for a San Francisco Lumber Co. to answer the telephone.

"This you, Cal?" queried the voice of a sporting editor friend of the veteran baseball player whose record as a member of the old Cincinnati Reds antedates the memory of most of today's followers of the game.

"The National League voted you a monthly pension today, Cal," the voice continued. "What do you think of that?"

It was welcome news to the old timer. Jobs have been more and infrequent and difficult to hold, since his retirement from baseball in 1889. Rheumatism and other ills of advancing age have meant weeks in the hospital of recent years. Cal is 72 years old.

Barrett of Little Rock broke the tie in home-run hitting existing a week ago, going to the front with seven. Henry of New Orleans is the leading base stealer with 17.

Umpire Wilson Released.

CHICAGO, June 10.—President Johnson of the American League today began to reduce his staff of umpires by releasing Frank Wilson. This indicates that "Big Ed" Walsh, former pitching star with the Chicago Americans, will be retained. This is Walsh's first year as an umpire in the American League.

HERE IS PROOF THAT YOU CAN EARN A "RANGER"

Other boys and girls are doing it. They have found our plan practical, logical and productive of generous compensation to them for the spare-time effort required.

With the approach of the school vacation term you will realize, more and more, the service and pleasure that a Ranger will afford you. It will adapt itself to your every outdoor activity, whether you go bike-hiking or just ride out to the swimmin' hole, the fishing stream, the ball game or tennis court, or on an errand.

NOTHING TO PAY— NOTHING TO COLLECT

Simply get twenty of your friends and neighbors to subscribe for the POST-DISPATCH (daily, except Sunday). This should not be difficult if you remind them of the superior merits of this great newspaper, now available to the reader at the reduced subscription price of 50 cents a month.

Offer is open only to boys and girls who are not identified with the sale or distribution of the POST-DISPATCH, and who reside within St. Louis carrier delivery limits, including East St. Louis, Belleville, Granite City, Venice and Madison in Illinois; and Kirkwood, Webster Groves, Florissant, Valley Park and Maplewood in Missouri.

THE "RANGER" IS OFFERED FREE OF ALL COST—ON THESE TERMS:

20 subscriptions are required—each for 6 months. No extra credit for yearly subscriptions.

New subscriptions are required—from persons who have not been readers of the Daily POST-DISPATCH within thirty days prior to the date of the subscription order, whether purchased from newsboy or newsdealer, or delivered by carrier.

Daily subscriptions are required. No credit allowed for Sunday POST-DISPATCH subscriptions. A Sunday POST-DISPATCH reader who has not been reading the Daily POST-DISPATCH may subscribe through you under this plan.

Verified subscriptions are required. We investigate the validity of the order and the subscriber's responsibility. All orders are received subject to acceptance or rejection by the POST-DISPATCH.

Home-Delivered subscriptions are required. Business district readers are better served by newsboys and cannot be included under the terms of this offer. This makes necessary a definitely restricted area, and orders will not be accepted for delivery within the district bounded

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

H. L. P.—You cannot sue for gambling debts and he is not subject to punishment.

JOS. M.—It is unlawful to transport any kind of liquor, unless you get a permit to do so.

OLD SUBSCRIBER.—You can sue to have the neighbor remove the structure which is attached to your property, unless you consented to his erecting it.

H. H. E.—It may be legal to charge the extra interest in the case you describe. We advise you to consult the Free Legal Aid Bureau, in the Municipal Courts Bldg.

THANK YOU.—If your landlady evicts you for nonpayment of rent she can hold your possessions, providing the place is a regular boarding house, otherwise she is not entitled to keep anything.

JAKE.—A single man is not obliged to leave anything to his brothers or sisters in his will. There are defects in the will submitted, so you had better have a lawyer draw up the will in the correct way.

X. Y. Z. O.—You should have the will examined by a lawyer to be sure that it is properly drawn. Your husband should appoint you to be executrix. He can do that by adding a codicil to the will. It is not necessary to have the will recorded.

PENSIONER.—You cannot make a will bequeathing the insurance payments made by the United States on the policy of a soldier killed in service. If you are the beneficiary now, at your death the payments will be made to any other heirs of the insured soldier, whether they be his immediate family or more distant relatives. In the case you describe the uncles and aunts or their heirs will share equal parts of the insurance payments.

SHARP DECLINES MARK WEEK-END ON STOCK MARKET

High-Priced Oil Shares Have Substantial Lower Range — Exchange Market Is Quiet With Sterling Steady

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 10—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"The liquidation which marked yesterday's late dealings was again in evidence in the stock market this morning. However, despite breaks of from 2 to 4 points in some of the high-priced oil issues, there was less unanimity in the movement toward lower levels than was the case yesterday afternoon, and after absorbing the selling orders on traders' books at the opening, trading became duller with a firmer tendency in the majority of stocks. An upturn in Mexican Petroleum heartened holders of other oil shares and the early losses in this group were partially recovered. Trading in the bond market was quieter. Gilt-edged issues were firm, but the more speculative varieties displayed some degree of weakness.

"Despite a certain amount of week-end profit-taking, cotton displayed a strong tone. Trading was only fairly active, however, and, as has been the case of late, was ruled largely by weather reports. There have been some further rains over the belt. Wheat also was only fairly active and while the July future made a slight advance at the opening, it lost a little ground later but held close to the previous close.

Exchange Market Quiet.

"The half holiday and the weather combined to turn the foreign exchange market into a listless affair. At the opening there were some signs of activity, but trading soon quieted down. Sterling held steady at yesterday's closing level just beneath $4.50. French francs, on the other hand, failed to continue their closing strength of the day before and reacted 3 points to 9.06 cents. German marks acted in a similar fashion and lost a couple of points in selling down to .33½. Dutch guilders remained strong and other continental rates were practically unchanged."

"Another favorable statement was issued by the Clearing House. Surplus increased $4,867,000 and there was a gain of $37,000,000 in loans. A gain of $28,978,000 in time deposits and of $49,829,000 in demand deposits, deducting $79,302,000 of Government deposits, was also recorded. Aggregate reserve totaled $597,000,000 and the excess reserve was $31,568,000.

Grain futures closed about unchanged at the week-end session on the Merchants' Exchange after a narrow range. The only news in the market was the Commerce Department report on prospective wheat stocks July 1.

In the cash grain market red wheat was steady. There was light demand for sound milling qualities. Hard was nominally unchanged. Cash corn was irregular, ½c higher to ½c lower. Demand was good. Cash oats were steady to ¼c lower. Demand was good.

The early range of prices was narrow and the tendency was upward in both wheat and corn. There was evening up over Sunday. Liverpool opened ¼d lower and closed ¼d higher.

July wheat opened at $1.11⅞; September wheat $1.12½. July corn 60⅞c, September corn 64c and December corn 60⅞c.

The three Northwestern markets combined today had 380 cars wheat, compared with 214 a week ago and 358 last year. Minneapolis today receiving 144 cars, Duluth 59 and Winnipeg 177.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Wheat trade was decidedly uninteresting and it was largely of a week-end evening-up character. The news was bearish enough to encourage the big shorts to stick to their holdings. There was but little pressure on the market aside from some week-end realizing by longs. Cash houses bought July and there was commission house buying of the deferred months. The deferred futures were relatively firmer than the July. Cash houses reported bids from exporters ¾c below the view of sellers. It is reported that both Port Colborne and Montreal are congested and this is stopping that outlet for grain. Seaboard reported little demand for grain. Cables fail to reflect any anxiety on the part of foreign buyers regarding supplies. Milling demand for wheat was quiet. Crop reports are generally favorable. Market closed ¼c lower to ¼c higher. July, $1.14⅝@1.14¾; September, $1.14⅜; December, $1.17⅛@1.17⅛.

Corn was moderately higher. There was little buying by commission houses, while locals were inclined to press the selling side. Eastern houses sold some corn. Receipts continue heavy. A slight improvement in the shipping demand was noted. Crop news is generally favorable. Market closed unchanged to ⅛c higher. July 62⅛@62⅜; September 65⅛@65⅜; December 64⅞.

Oats were dull and followed the trend of other grains. July seemed to be for sale on every bulge and the July-September spread widened to 2⅛ cents. Shipping demand was greatly improved. Market closed ⅛c to ¼c higher. July 36⅝c; September 38⅝@38⅝c; December 40⅞c.

Provisions were easier with hogs. Lard sold 5c to 7½c lower and ribs 10c to 70c lower.

HOG MARKET WEAKENS AFTER A STEADY START

NATIONAL STOCK YARDS, Ill., June 10.—Today's estimated receipts: Cattle and calves 450; hogs 3500; sheep, 300; horses and mules 10.

CATTLE—The day's run was estimated at only 450 head and the volume of business was not sufficient to justify a change in quotations. Some consignments were carried over for Monday.

For the week: Receipts were moderate in number and trade showed marketed improvement in virtually all departments. Steers and yearlings advanced 25c to 35c; butcher cows, 25c to 50c, and canner and cutter cows and bulls, strong to 15c higher. Veal calves gained $1.

Quotations: Beef steers, high, $9.50; low, $6; bulk, $7.50 to $8.60; butcher yearlings, high, $9.50; low, $4; bulk, $7.50 to $8.60; butcher cows, bulk, $4.75 to $6; cutter cows, bulk, $3.25 to $3.75; canner cows, bulk, $3 to $3.25; beef and bologna bulls, bulk, $4 to $5.

HOGS—A light Saturday run of hogs sold on a generally steady basis until the closing rounds, when the market weakened 5 to 10 cents. The top at $10.80 was steady with the preceding day, but bulk of the hogs sold from 10.65@10.75, compared to $10.70 to $10.75 for Friday's run. Pigs were in very light supply and hardly enough sales were made to establish a basis for comparison. Better weight pigs, 130 to 150 pounds, cleared from $10.50@10.70, or about steady, but weights under 120 pounds were generally 25 cents lower, clearing from $9.75@10.25. Rough hogs were steady to 10 cents lower, bulk of sows going at $9.

SHEEP—Today's light run of 300 sheep and lambs sold on a slow, but practically steady basis. Receipts for the week were the largest of the year, running to 27,381, an increase of 8009 over a week previous. Despite the sharp increase, however, the market has not changed materially since the close of the preceding week. Choice lambs are quotable from $13.75@14.25, or steady to 25 cents lower, with sheep steady, light weights bringing $6@6.50 and heavies $3.50.

HORSES AND MULES—There was not enough business conducted in this department to have any effect on quotations. Plain horses showed an uneven loss for the week, though best drafty types, also mules, held about steady.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The whole point of interest in the Stock Exchange position today was how far the reaction would have to go before undoing the excesses of the pool speculation during the last two months. Outside considerations scarcely entered in at all. The money market was certainly further away than at any time from any suggestion of restricted credit facilities.

The adjournment of the bankers' conference at Paris for three months, postponing for that length of time any further discussion of a German loan, was a disappointment. Still it had been well anticipated. Even in the exchange market, most sensitive to development in international finance, there was very slight response to the news. French francs continued to sag, but the loss was slight.

Another outburst of selling followed the opening of the stock market. For a quarter of an hour or so, this had an unsettling effect. Then efforts were made quite evidently to stop the downward movement. Supporting orders made their appearance, not in a general way but in certain stocks, notably in the oils and the steel shares. A sharp recoil in Mexican Petroleum fitted in with the reported opportune discovery of a 50,000-barrel well. Other oils in which pools have been active—Marland, Sinclair and Cosden—rallied rather more easily than the average of the list.

Sugar stocks were steady, but the stocks involved in the three company steel merger did not reflect to the extent that might have been anticipated, the reported statement by the Lockwood committee counsel that he considered the next capitalization conservative.

The attempts to bring about a recovery were not, in the end, particularly successful. Part of the list remained steady up to the close. But in the last 20 minutes professional operators started another drive against the market and succeeded in forcing down a large number of issues below their previous low points of the reaction and keeping them weak at the finish.

The Bond Market.

Prices in the bond market today were generally fractionally lower, especially the convertible issues. Liberty bonds kept active, but failed to exceed, and in one or two instances, to equal, their closing prices of the preceding day. Foreign external loans were featureless. Japanese first 4½s rose slightly and the Mexican Government 5s were higher. Others like the Rio de Janeiro 8s went lower.

Among railway issues, the low-priced bonds held their ground fairly well, and there were only a few changes in the higher-grade mortgages. The new International and Great Northern adjustments sank over a point to well below the level at which trading in them began recently, and as compared to their high above 55. C. & A. 3½s sold off, while the 3s were up. In the industrial section, Producers and Refiners 8s, with warrants, lost a point. Cons. Gas convertible 7s were active between 118½ and 119. Cerro de Pasco 8s were weak and among the Greater New York tractions, Interborough 6s, when issued, and Third Avenue adjustment went down fractionally.

The volume of business this week in the New York market for Canadian Provincial bonds increased.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—The Cleveland Union Terminals Co. was granted authority by the Interstate Commerce Commission today to issue $12,000,000 of 5½ per cent first mortgage sinking fund gold bonds, series A, to be sold at not less than 92½ per cent of par and accrued interest, to be used for capital purposes.

The New York Central Railroad Co. and other railroads which will use the new union terminals station in Cleveland, will assume jointly the obligation and liability as guarantors of the bonds. The bonds are to be used in the construction of the projected new union terminal.

Dry Goods Market Review.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 10.—Cotton goods stiffened and were more active yesterday following the rise in cotton. Denims were advanced half a cent a yard in some quarters, to a basis of 17½ cents for 2.20's and 1 cent a yard in other places. Yarns were higher. Burlaps showed little change, the market still being irregular because of the collapse in Calcutta. Silk production is slowly increasing in the large centers. Jobbers report a moderate business with the tendency very marked toward small purchases for nearby delivery.

MUCH REPUBLICAN SUPPORT FOR REED IN SOME COUNTIES

Situation in North Central Missouri Worries G. O. P. Candidates for Senator and Alarms Long Forces.

NO LEGAL WAY TO PREVENT ACTION

In Some Sections Republicans Must Vote in Democratic Primary or Have No Voice in Local Election.

By CURTIS A. BETS.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Patch.

MOBERLY, Mo., June 10.—The unusual situation of Republicans openly campaigning for Senator Reed in Randolph County and others of the strong Democratic counties of north central Missouri has aroused much concern among friends of Republican candidates for the nomination for U. S. Senator and has created a problem which the supporters of Breckinridge Long, the opponent of Reed for the Democratic nomination, are cudgeling their brains to meet.

From present indications there will be several thousand Republicans in the stronger Democratic counties voting in the Democratic primaries, and virtually this entire vote will go to Reed, there being little if any sentiment among Republicans for Long. That Republicans voting in the primary of the other party is contrary to the spirit of the primary law is of little importance, there being no law adequately reaching the situation.

In every election there is more or less participation in Democratic primaries by Republicans in the heavy Democratic counties and by Democrats in Republican primaries, in the heavy Republican counties, due to the fact that only in that way can members of the minority parties participate actively in the selection of the local officials.

Help Name County Ticket.

Take a county such as Randolph, where the Democratic majority in the general election is approximately 4000, there is no possibility of the election of a Republican to county office, and thus the Republicans are virtually disfranchised. By going into the Democratic primary the Republicans have a voice in determining who the Democratic nominees shall be and thus they have a voice in choosing the county officials.

In Randolph County it is not unusual for the Republican primary vote to be as low as 500 while in the general election the party vote will go to 2500. In this way the Republicans have helped name the Democratic county officials in whom they are generally more interested than they are in the State candidates and yet can vote for Republican nominees for State and national offices in the general election. While in all probability the Reed vote will be largely increased by these Republicans, candidates of the Republican party for the nomination for U. S. Senator and for Congressmen and the members of the Republican organization where one exists in these counties are bending real efforts toward inducing Republicans to remain within their own party this year.

There is no doubt that the Republican organization fears Reed more than Long in the general election, the Republican view being that Reed would receive many Republican votes and Long few Republican votes.

In some places there are indications that the support of Reed by Republicans is serving to hold for Long some Democrats who might have gone to Reed.

Local Ticket Fight.

In Randolph County, where the Reed strength among Democrats is as strong as any place in the State, the stage has been set to carry the Reed-Long fight on down through the local ticket. At the last minute opposition to local candidates who were known to be Long men was brought out, the purpose of the Reed men being two fold, to attempt to force the candidates favoring Long to remain quiet on the senatorship during the campaign through fear of being defeated themselves and in some instances out of revenge because of their known support of Long. It is customary in this county for an official to be renominated without opposition and for members of the County Comimttee to be renamed without opposition if they desire to return to the committee, but that is not the case this year.

James Yeakey of Huntsville, former County Treasurer, is a candidate against Oak Hunter for the Legislature. Hunter has had several terms — went almost to the last day before the filings closed without opposition for renomination. While he had refrained from participation in the Reed-Long fight his law partner was an active Long man and it was generally known that Hunter favored Long.

In fact Hunter was one of the 16 members of the Legislature who walked out of the hall three years ago when Reed was delivering a denuneiation of President Wilson before the House of Representatives. Therrill Epperly, candidate for Presiding Judge of the county court is opposed by Judge Richard Burton, of Union township and Redick O'Bryan, a strong Long supporter, is opposed by W. M. Stringer, of Huntsville, for renomination for Prosecuting Attorney.

Fight in Moberly.

In Moberly there is a bitter fight for membership on the county committee from Sugar Creek township. Green Terrill, the present County Chairman, one of the Long leaders of the county is opposed by Rolla Rothwell, a newspaper man and a Reed supporter.

This contest is of particular interest because the winner is virtually certain of election as chairman of the committee the chairmanship almost invariably going to Sugar Creek township which includes the city of Moberly. The situation existing here is in many respects the same in Audrain, Clay, Howard, Monroe Platte and Boone Counties. All are heavy Democratic counties in which there is no chance of election of Republicans to local offices and in which Republicans do not hesitate to vote in Democratic primaries.

BRITISH NEWSPAPERS HAIL ACHIEVEMENT OF MT. EVEREST PARTY AS NOTABLE TRIUMPH

Sir Martin Conway, Noted Explorer, Also Declares Ascent to Altitude of 26,800 Feet Was Tremendous Undertaking.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1922.)

LONDON, June 10.—The achievement of the Mt. Everest explorers in setting a new mark in the annals of moutaineering was hailed yesterday by the British press and public as a triumph of man over nature's obstacles.

"I think it was a tremendous feat for the Everest climbers to have reached the height of 26,800 feet," said Sir Martin Conway, member of Parliament and a famous explorer, in an interview.

"This, of course, beats the record by more than 2000 as regards the highest point ever reached by any mountain climber. I never expected they would climb much above 25,500 feet, and the fact they surpassed that without oxygen is significant. I would not go so far as to say that this now proves the summit may be reached successfully at an early date, but, at all events, I am quite prepared to hear they have gone as high without oxygen as with it."

A typical press comment from the Times follows:

"Even if the climbers of the expedition are not fated to succeed in their attempt, it will be a proud consolation to feel that the men who now hold the honor of having set foot higher on earth than any previous explorer are English. But because of what they have already accomplished it may be said without undue optimism that the prospect of reaching the summit now seems much less of a forlorn hope than it did."

The Evening News says: "Few will read without an uplift of imagination that three members of the Everest expedition have climbed to the height of 26,800 feet. As a mere achievement of human endeavor this great ascent to a point 2 00 feet higher than has ever yet been reached by mountain climbers would command the attention of everyone. But all must feel that there is something more in this than the mere breaking of an altitude record. We can only guess what it means to look out on the Himalayas from this height, but the mere reading of it gives us a rich conception of man's life."

RONGBUK GLACIER CAMP, 16,000, May 14, via Simla, June 9.—Since the fourth communication was dispatched a great deal of progress has been made as we have been favored by better weather, which heartened us, because we had been behind the schedule laid down for our guidance. The conditions on the mountain have generally improved, but the low night temperatures of this camp are usually 25 degrees and frost continues.

The condition of the great mountains in this eastern end of the Himalayas and on the northern sides is most curious. Here it is really springtime and much different conditions prevail this time of the year than in any part of the Himalayas 100 miles westward. There conditions approach far more nearly those of European ranges, where the highest mountains are almost unapproachable.

Although conditions appear more favorable for exploration in the Eastern Himalayas such is really not the case. The range is narrow and well within the Monsoon sphere, which in the East begins early and usually lasts until late. As a result one can explore only during the summer months.

Two Months of Good Weather Ahead

The Monsoon lasts until September. In the autumn the great cold aloft and the high winds, although the weather is clear, prevents the explorer going higher. Therefore it seems probable not more than two months of suitable weather prevails in the east in which attempts can be made at the great mountains against at least four months in the West-Himalyas. Longstaff considers this statement too optimistic. He thinks there is only noe month of really suitable weather available.

The last letter related the troubles of transport and in order to obviate further delay in establishing camps east of Rongbuk Glacier we were obliged to employ 90 local Tibetan coolies. Only 45 men eventually materialized and after working well for two days they alleged their food was exhausted. That obliged us to allow them to descend to get more. However, they made a bee line for Inkharta Valley, more than three miles away, east of Rongbuk Valley. This sort of an incident is common in all Asiatic travel, but owing to our present position with little time available it is unusually annoying.

On May 5, Strutt, Morshead, Norton and Longstaff started to make a complete reconnoissance of the east to find sites for establishing camps at the foot of Changla or North Col. The reconnoissance of both was satisfactory.

We pitched the first camp after traveling three hours into the mouth of Rongbuk Valley. Here we built stone huts and filled them with a large quantity of rations. From this camp the reconnoissance actually started.

The camp itself is situated at a junction of the east and main Rongbuk valleys at 17,600 feet, known as Camp No. 1.

Camp No. 2 Established.

On May 6, the party followed the true east bank of Rongbuk Glacier to the point Wheeler visited in 1921 when making a photographic survey of East Rongbuk Glacier and great mass of Everest. Here they established Camp No. 2 at 19,360 feet. Then the reconnoitering line advanced along the troublesome side of the glacier, descending from the peak marked as the 22,500-foot subsidiary of the north peak at Changtse on the ridge descending north from Everest.

Longstaff with his porters has left to establish permanently Camp No. 3. From here on I will let Strutt tell his own story.

"We proceeded up the left bank of East Rongbuk Glacier to where the next large lateral glacier from the northwest joins East Rongbuk. This glacier, consisting of enormous seracs intersected by crevasses running in every direction, proves a scene of wild confusion. Crossing these seracs, we eventually effected the main glacier's surface.

Furrows 100 Feet Deep.

"After proceeding half a mile the glacier was found to have furrowed from the northeast to the southwest 100 feet deep and 300 or 400 feet wide, rendering progress to the southwest apparently impossible. The party accordingly turned south, attaining the left bank of the main glacier well westward of the point of 20,100 feet. Lassitude attacked most of the party but we struggled on until pulled up by vertical seracs 300 to 500 feet high, rendering further progress on the left bank impossible. Morshead's skill contrived to find on the route homeward a negotiable passage in the furrow southwards, thus insuring a feasible route.

"On May 8 the same party with six porters left Camp No. 2, advancing up the furrow Morshead discovered. We proceeded up the main glacier consistiing of a ridge and a furrow running perpendicularly a course north and south.

"The ridges are very hard and covered with a few inches of dry snow. Everest towering above us revealed in all its majesty of brown and yellow slabs intersected by criss-crossed regular furrows of snow and ice and obviously is not in good condition yet for the attempt.

Camp No. 3 at 21,000 Feet.

"Relying on Longstaff's topographical skill the party continued the journey. Suddenly a view at North Col burst simultaneously in a recess to the north, and we saw a moraine covered shelf under the high but safe cliffs of the north peak of Changtse, 24,730 feet. Camp No. 3 was immediately fixed at about 21,000 feet. All the porters are well except one, who early collapsed with mountain sickness. The temperature at Camp No. 2 ran from 34 to 37 degrees Fahrenheit."

In the meantime all hands at the main camp, including the kitchen help, was called into service owing to the desertion of the Tibetan coolies to prepare for the push on toward Camp No. 3.

We pressed every hand into service in the hope of making up for lost time.

Unfortunately, the situation was complicated by the outbreak of an epidemic of a type of influenza among the porters. The Britishers were not affected. Otherwise our health is excellent and there is every hope of success. We next expect to be able to describe the successful munitioning of North Col Camp.

OBJECTIONS RAISED TO MINIMUM WAGE PLAN FOR WOMEN

Representatives of Industry Express Doubt as to Feasibility of Establishing Definite Figures.

STATE COMMISSION CONDUCTS HEARING

Employers Will Be Forced to Drop Many Feminine Workers Under Proposal, Elmer Donnell Declares.

Strong doubt of the feasibility of establishing minimum wage requirements affecting women and minors in Missouri was expressed by a large majority of the 28 representatives of St. Louis and State industries who met yesterday in the Chamber of Commerce with members of the commission appointed through the last Legislature to draft a bill for a permanent minimum wage commission in Missouri.

The present commission has declared that the bill, which it is mandatory upon it to introduce at the next session, is to provide for an elastic minimum scale, dependent entirely upon local living and industrial conditions, rather than an inflexible one binding all industries alike.

While these provisions were generally held fair in principle, many of the industrial representatives voiced the belief that no adequate method could be devised to determine what was a just and reasonable wage for girl and women employes. Differences in efficiency of the workers, the contrast between girls supporting themselves or their families and those working for a little extra money and the question of seasonable layoffs were brought up to illustrate this difficulty.

May Force Women Out.

"One of the drawbacks of the minimum wage standard is that it forces employers to drop many women who cannot actually produce enough to justify such payment and to employ men instead, thus defeating the real purpose of the measures," Elmer Donnell, general manager of the Associated Industries of Missouri, declared. He said he knew of no St. Louis concerns that were not paying a living wage to women employes, but added he was not in a position to state what such a fair wage was.

W. V. Eaton, director of the Rice-Stix Dry Goods Co., said that while a national minimum-wage law might be acceptable, Missouri industries were not inclined to support a State measure when having to face competition from unrestricted firms in other states. He also gave as a reason for opposing such a bill the 495,000 dozens of overalls and work shirts turned out annually in the State under the prison labor system.

F. N. Henry of the St. Louis Shoe Manufacturers' Association declared it his opinion that 100 per cent of the industrial representatives present were opposed to a State minimum-wage law.

Frank Smith Replies.

Replying for the commission, State Representative Frank Smith of St. Louis, who was chairman of the committee which considered the minimum-wage question at the last session, declared that the commission was convinced that there was need for such legislation and said that it proposed to introduce a "joker-proof" bill that would catch all employers exploiting women labor, while in no way interfering with concerns giving fair treatment to employes.

Miss Marie Ames, a member of the commission, said national statistics showed that two-thirds of employed girls contributed to the living expenses of their families and that half of this number afforded total support. Conditions in Missouri were better than in many other states, she added.

Members of the commission expressed themselves as satisfied with the results of the meeting, saying that they had expected to meet opposition, but believed they had shown the industrial representatives that they intended to proceed in a spirit of fairness. Mrs. Nelle Burger of Springfield presided at the meeting. Other members present were Mrs. Harriet Violette of Kirksville and State Senator Peter Anderson of St. Louis.

NO ROMANCES BUT SOME OIL FOUND IN NEW ILLINOIS FIELD

FARMERS REFUSED TO GET EXCITED

About 40 Wells Brought In That Produce About 400 Barrels a Day in Little Over Year.

When oil was struck early last year on the Frierdich farm, between Columbia and Waterloo, Ill., 16 miles from St. Louis, conductors on the Waterloo interurban, with a talent for facetious prophecy, named it Oil City. Their expectation that oil profits would justify them as oil prophets, and that a city would grow where only crops had grown was shared by all of Monroe County and part of St. Clair County.

They still call it Oil City. Oil is there, but the city of prophecy has not been fulfilled. Prophets are still there and profits are there, but the latter have not justified the great expectations of the former. An oil field is there, which rewards prudent probing and persistent pumping, but wealth is not gushing from the ground and Oil City, flag station and side track, seems unlikely ever to achieve the bright lights and high jinks envisioned at its christening.

The boom phase has passed without a disastrous reaction, and development is going forward and production is being accomplished on an industrial, not a speculative basis. There has been no disastrous reaction because even in the boom days speculation was held in check and there was little wildcatting and the process of simmering down to a business basis has not been attended by severe losses.

How Situation Was Controlled.

This is so because it takes more than an oil boom to carry the cautious Monroe County farmers off their feet and because leading men of Columbia and Waterloo, having the farmers' confidence, have largely controlled the situation from the first and have kept speculation from running wild.

A year or so before oil was struck on the Friedich farm, when an artesian well was being sunk at Waterloo, there was a showing of oil, which was brought to the attention of the State Geological Survey, which made an inspection and reported a favorable structure.

Two or three months before the Friedich find, which attracted public attention, oil was struck on the Gaertner farm, near by, which did not attract much public attention. Maybe there was a reason. Anyhow, when the Friedich well came in, and there was a rush of oil gentry to what looked like a new field, it was found that most of the best acreage of Monroe County was under lease to small syndicates in Columbia and Waterloo.

Wild Scamper for Leases.

The leases, given for a nominal consideration, were for five years, and provided that if oil was produced one barrel in eight would go to the owner of the land. There was a wild scamper for leases and some were obtained on acreage not favorably located, at rather outlandish prices. The local syndicates were besieged by speculators, and they admit a little ruefully now that if they had known more about the game they might have made a good deal of money without prejudicing the more permanent prosperity which was their goal. But they wanted the field developed and were more partial to the producing companies that would bore for oil than to the speculators who would soak the suckers. Leases were sublet at the best prices that could be obtained, in the form of a bonus or a percentage of production, or both.

The advantage of the bonus was that it was real and not contingent. The Columbia group, preferring the bird in the hand, went in mostly for bonuses, and did very well. The Waterloo group, composed largely of county officials, attracted by the plumage of the bird in the bush, let themselves into some favorable percentage deals which have justified their expectations.

For a while there was wildcatting around the fringes of the field, extending over into St. Clair County. A few dry holes, however, dissipated hopes of an extension of the field in that direction and development has been confined to an area about six miles long, extending northward from Waterloo, and about two miles wide, lying between the tracks of the Waterloo interurban and the Mobile & Ohio.

40 Small Producing Wells.

There are now in this area about 40 wells, with a capacity of five to 25 barrels a day each. Because of development work and other interruptions, operation is not constant, so that the output of the field is only about 200 barrels a day.

The oil comes from what is known as a shallow pool. The wells are all between 400 and 500 feet deep. The oil has to be pumped from all of them. It is stored in tanks and piped to the interurban sidings and loaded into tank cars.

Economy of operation, due to the shallowness of the pool and the proximity of the shipping facilities and the short haul to the Wood River (Ill.) refineries, enables profitable operation on a comparatively light production.

The best wells have had a materially greater production when first brought in, but after a few months have settled down to a moderate production. One brought in recently on the Lena Acker farm, three miles northeast of Waterloo, was claimed to have an initial capacity of 260 barrels a day, and is said to be still producing at near that capacity.

Claims for Shallow Wells.

As a recompense for the tendency manifested by other wells, which may or may not be true of the new one, to settle down to a modest production, it is claimed that the production of a shallow strata is more permanent than that of the deepest strata.

The drillers who overran the section after the Frierdich strike, volunteering advice as to favorable locations and ready to bore holes anywhere at so much a bore, disappeared after a few fiascos, leaving dry holes as mementoes of their prowess. The boring is now being done by responsible companies in furtherance of serious development.

The oil-field flotsam which floated in and gave rise to the expectation that a mushroom city would spring up, drifted away again when the excitement simmered down and development was placed on a substantial basis.

No Romance Produced.

No romances have been produced. No extremely poor persons have been made fabulously rich. With one exception, the families on whose lands oil has been struck were wealthy before. Maximum royalties of $700 to $800 a month have added to their wealth, but have not made Croesuses of them. The one exception is a farmer who, through ill-health and misfortune, had been reduced to the necessity of mortgaging his farm. The discovery of oil was very timely for him. The mortgage has been paid off and his fortunes are again easy.

The leases have ranged from $1 to $5 an acre, with a contingent claim on one-eighth of the output of wells sunk on the property. The terms made by the local syndicates with the producing companies are known to be much more favorable, but the figures are not given.

When there was a hope that the field would be found to extend into St. Clair County, a syndicate of Millstadt men took leases on several thousand acres, paying only $1 for each lease, subject to one-eighth of any oil that might be produced, but after several dry wells were sunk the leases were canceled. Gas was struck in considerable volume near Millstadt, but the hole was plugged and nothing is being done toward marketing it.

Furore Almost Absorbed.

Waterloo and Columbia, ultra-conservative German-American communities, have absorbed the oil furore without any surface disturbance. It is a matter of relief to the staid residents that the flurry is past and community life is back to normal. The oil field lying between the two towns is looked upon as a worthwhile industry, of some benefit to both. It tends to make their solid prosperity more so without disturbing the calm current of events.

Old-timers shudder a little at the thought of what might have happened if Oil City had come to life down there on the Frierdich and Gaertner and Kolmer and Gummersheimer farms, spreading the virus of its unrest northward to Columbia and southward to Waterloo. It might even have disturbed the comfortable custom of shutting up shop for an hour at noon.

"NO LIQUOR IN MY CELLAR," SAYS LONG

Senate Candidate Replies to Interview to Charges of Reed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MAYSVILLE, Mo., June 10.—Breckinridge Long, candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, made no direct reference in his speech here last night to the charges of Senator Reed, his Democratic opponent, that Long has "300 bottles of liquor in his cellar" and that "Long is running as a 'dry' in the country and a 'wet' in the city."

Long did reply indirectly to Reed however when he said that Reed's speech was an echo of his speeches in 1920 in Southwest Missouri and that he (Long) carried every county in which those speeches were made.

When asked before his speech last night, for specific comment on the charge that he has 300 bottles of liquor in his cellar and on Reed's further charge that he is running "dry" in the country and "wet" in the city, Long said, "There is no liquor in my cellar."

"But," Long added, "if I had as much whisky there as is alleged, I could lure into the Mississippi River the entire following of my opponent."

Long did not repeat this in his speech, but had the following to say about Reed's attack: "I see in the morning paper that a certain distinguished gentleman has again descended to the level of personal abuse, has again used sarcasm and irony as a method of political appeal. This method of attack has been used by him against Democrats before. It was used against the Secretary of War in the last administration. It was used against the Secretary of the Navy. It was used against the Secretary of the Treasury, and even against Woodrow Wilson himself, whom he referred to as the 'long-eared animal which goes braying across the country.'"

SENATE CONSIDERATION OF BONUS BILL TO BE DEFERRED

Another Amendment Offered Proposing $350,000,000 Land Settlement Feature.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Efforts to obtain Senate consideration of the soldiers' bonus bill will be deferred for at least 10 days, it is stated authoritatively. Whether it will be taken up by agreement among Republican leaders or without the consent of some, remains to be determined.

Another amendment to the bonus measure was offered yesterday, Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, proposing the Smith-McNary $350,000,000 reclamation measure as a land settlement feature. This bill already has been reported to both the House and Senate, but as a part of the bonus measure it would be changed, McNary said, so that veterans would be given preference in the purchase of land in excess of the farm unit and in the preference to homestead public lands lying within a reclamation district. Under another change the service of veterans would be utilized as practicable in the construction of each reclamation project.

"NOTHING IN STEEL MERGER TO WARRANT PROSECUTION".

Samuel Untermyer, After Inquiry, Says Three Companies Control Only a Tenth of Ingot Output.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Lockwood Committee's inquiry into the two recently announced steel mergers ended abruptly yesterday with an announcement by Samuel Untermyer, its volunteer counsel, that he had discovered nothing in the transactions to warrant recommending action against them.

The committee's inquiry, he said, conducted because legislative mandate requires it to investigate all combinations affecting the building trades, had served to show that the three companies forming the North American steel merger, together control but one-tenth of the ingot output of the country.

If this merger serves, as some of its advocates claim it will, partly to reduce the big differential now existing in favor of the United States Steel Corporation, it will prove beneficial rather than harmful. In view of the fact that the case of the Bethlehem-Lackawanna merger is now before the Federal Trade Commission, he said, it would be improper for him to discuss it.

BULGARIA REJECTS ALLIED CONTROL OVER HER FINANCES

Premier of Country Says Stand Is Based on the Treaty of Neuilly.

By the Associated Press.

SOFIA, Bulgaria, June 10.—Bulgaria refuses to accept the establishment of allied control over her finances, as proposed by the Reparations Commission, and will attempt to reopen the question at The Hauge conference, it is declared by Premier Stambouliisky.

"I will not sign any such convention," the Premier told the correspondent. "We refuse to recognize such a convention, and in so doing are basing our stand on the treaty of Neuilly."

SUPREME COURT RULING CRITICISED BY GOMPERS

Head of Labor Federation Interprets Coronado Decision as Negation of Right to Strike.

CINCINNATI, June 10.—As a forerunner of the convention of the American Federation of Labor, which opens on Monday, members of the federation's executive council will meet tomorrow to consider the Supreme Court's recent decision in the Coronado coal case, which Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, interprets as a negation of the right to strike. The attitude of organized labor on the decision is expected to be drafted by the council as a part of its report to be made to the convention on Monday.

Gompers in addressing a club of business men yesterday interpreted the Supreme Court decision in the Coronado coal case as a negation of the right to strike, and declared that organized labor would appeal to Congress for new legislation setting aside the decision in criticising the Supreme Court, Gompers said that he expected to be "taken strictly to account" for his utterances, adding that "I do not run away from a fight."

"But it has come to a pretty pass," he continued, "when an American citizen can no longer discuss and criticise the decision of the courts. Anyone, if he feels so disposed, can criticise even the President of the United States, or the United States Senate or the Congress. Pray of what flesh are the members of the Supreme Court that they are above criticism beyond the President of the United States?"

Delegates to the meeting of the metal trades department of the federation yesterday by unanimous action assailed Congress and state legislatures as enemies of labor and declared for labor's active participation in the fall campaigns in an effort to elect its friends regardless of their politics. Gompers said the Coronado decision made international unions, indorsing strikes, liable for damages, and he asserted this meant the unions must withstand "constant litigation or go out of business."

"If you compel men and women, regardless of condition," he continued, "to work against their will you will have re-established slavery. Some people are impressed that now is the time to take advantage of the working people, reduce wages and break up their organizations and under the 'open shop' weaken or destroy the unions."

1000 Years of Business Experience

A BUSINESS man of the Central West asserted that he had more than 1,000 years of business experience—through the fact he had met with others at business conventions to discuss his business problems.

"If I have had twenty years of experience, and I exchange ideas, frequently, with fifty other men of equal experience, then I have the advantage of 1,000 years of business experience to apply to my business problems," he said.

This same man, a self-made millionaire, said that one idea he picked up at a convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs had been worth thousands of dollars to him.

There will be many such ideas for you, if you will but take them home and use them, at the

Barely Keeping His Shirt On.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE writer read the article of Kum Kleen in a recent issue of your paper. Think the inclosed laundry bill will go Kum Kleen one better. The bill shows that the writer paid 25 cents each for just ordinary shirts, collar attached, no starch. Like K. K., the writer thinks there is a big margin of profit to the laundries. Soap is cheaper now than a few years, or perhaps months, ago. Water no higher per 1000 gallons—labor undoubtedly up also, yet those people ask and get more money. In addition you will notice that the laundry combine has added one cent extra. When I asked what that was for I was informed that it was for interest; later inquiry was told that the extra cent was for insurance. Now can you beat it? Who authorized the insurance? Certainly not I. Recently these people had the colossal nerve to ask the City Water Commissioner for a reduction in their water rate!

ANOTHER VICTIM.

More Cheers for Van Loon.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT would seem almost superfluous to express appreciation of the serial publication of such a work as Van Loon's "Story of Mankind." I am prompted to do so, however, on reading a letter by one correspondent, indicating that approval by your readers may not be absolutely unanimous.

If such historians as Wells and Van Loon had "in their tender years been so grounded and rooted in the faith once for all delivered to the saints" as to become disqualified for absolutely free and fearless investigation of all the matter relevant to their histories, they would just to that extent be incompetent historians of such matters. It is indeed their glory to be holding fast to the best truth their hearts and intellects enable them to attain, regardless of the older settled beliefs whether in religion, politics or economics.

If That Were the Issue—!

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR newspaper has ridiculed the Anti-Saloon League, and has had something to say about the personal liberties of the people. The Anti-Saloon League, however, shows surpassing intelligence in achieving its purpose. Your newspaper has become the rather unwilling instrument of that quixotic organization. The Anti-Saloon League is fighting Senator Reed because he favors personal liberty for the people. Your newspaper is fighting him because he favors national liberty for the people.

The difference is that the Anti-Saloon League is on a live issue and you are on a dead one. Not all the international bankers in the world and all the newspapers of this country will be able to set aside the verdict of the American people at the polls when, by a majority of 7,000,000 votes, they met the "solemn referendum'" challenge of Woodrow Wilson and hung an enormous piece of crepe on the ill-starred League of Nations.

It took William J. Bryan and the Democratic party a long time to discover that free silver was a dead dog. That is why the Republican party was returned consistently a winner. How long is it going to take you to discover the demise of that fantastic supergovernment as proposed by Mr. Wilson?

Meanwhile the Anti-Saloon League doesn't care a thing about the League of Nations. It is sufficiently astute to recognize a dead dog.

If you want to see a dog really lively, something of the Airedale variety, why not draw the line a little closer on a live issue, such as the line drawn by the Anti-Saloon League, and lend your aid to a "solemn referendum" on such issues as states rights, the personal liberty of the people and such constitutional safeguards as the people had when we had a real Constitution and sane interpretation by a Supreme Court?

That Sunday Morning Nap.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IT is with a keen sense of gratitude that the writer applauds and praises "Cliff Dweller" in his campaign to put a stop to the early sale of papers Sunday mornings.

It is a most distressing thing to be aroused at an extremely early hour by the piercing voice of a newsboy when rest is of such vital importance to men who use their mental and physical efforts six days of the week to their utmost and who require Sunday morning rest, at least until 9 a. m. with which to fortify themselves for another week's grind.

It has long been a nuisance from which citizens have a right to demand relief, and a law governing the hour at which the sale of Sunday papers may be started; should be established as soon as possible.

We believe the Post-Dispatch, always ready to countenance and approve all things pertaining to the good and welfare of St. Louis, will make an effort to abolish this distasteful annoyance.

MARTYRS.

THE SUPREME WAGE CUT.

Leaders of 1,200,000 railway workers whose wages have been ordered cut by the Railway Labor Board or are under consideration for reductions are to make a formal appeal to President Harding over the heads of the board to stave off further reductions of pay. The total sum to be lopped off the income of the 400,000 shop crafts and 500,000 maintenance of way men is calculated at $110,000,000. The labor spokesmen will demand of the President whether he thinks their curtailed wages will be sufficient "to maintain an American standard of living and properly sustain a family."

The Railway Labor Board is the President's eyes and ears, his delegated intelligence and judgment of railway wage matters. It is hard to imagine, then, how or on what basis he might interfere with its deliberations or decisions. The most he could do would be to implant in it a fear of hereafter passing independent judgment where it might appear to be politically inexpedient.

The President and his fellow Republicans in Congress could, however, prevent reductions in the pay of railway and other workers and consumers if they would deny contemplated increases in the profits of large industrial interests which have dictated the schedules of the McCumber tariff bill. The shrinkage in the wages of railway men becomes inconsequential in comparison with the "invisible tax" which it is intended to levy on all workers and other consumers for the benefit and under the detailed direction of special interests constituting what Elliott Thurston, one of the Post-Dispatch correspondents in Washington, calls the "superlobby."

According to estimates of experts for the Senate minority the wool interests will be able to gouge American consumers under the McCumber schedules to the tune of $310,000,000 a year; the Silk Trust can shake us down for $274,000,000, and the cotton barons can collect an additional $750,000,000! It is estimated that the total booty collectible under this unprecedented tariff grab will equal the entire revenue of the Government, which runs to several billions. What, compared with these vast sums, is a loss of $110,000,000 in wages?

High wages are a delusion and a spurious currency when their purchasing power is reduced by high prices. The President has no moral option to interfere with an official wage-fixing tribunal. He is responsible, as head of his party, for legislation that makes a joke out of any talk about maintaining the American "standard of living." Not only should the railway unions petition him to prevent this actual cut in their wages, but every other organization of workers and consumers in America should join them.

There is no danger at present of a European invasion of American markets. Imports the past year have fallen off rather than increased. Talk of the need of high protective duties in staple manufactured articles is pure humbug. Such protection would be nothing but a cut in the wage or salary of every consumer in America.

What a difference between the immaculate and untroubled Senator who said: "Government, after all, is a simple thing," and the vexed President who heatedly admonishes his critics to "put on the brakes"!

FACING FACTS IN EUROPE.

The time is close at hand when delusion on the power of Germany to pay reparations without the alleviation of a loan or other co-operative measure must cease. The committee of bankers has reported its inability to submit a plan for a loan to Germany without the unanimous support of all the countries represented on the Reparations Commission and without a clearly outlined credit basis for Germany.

In connection with this decision a remark of Hugo Stinnes, who declares a short-term loan would be worse than nothing, is significant. "We must urge," he said, "even at the risk of further invasion, that reparations be considerably reduced and fixed so they can be covered by a long-term international loan."

Here is a hint to France to go ahead and seize the Ruhr if it cannot be induced to listen to the plea of modified reparations terms. The point toward which events have long been gravitating appears to be at hand. Stinnes speaks with the authority of knowledge if not of office. What will be the French rejoinder? Occupation of the Ruhr will hurt Germany. It will not pay reparations.

Through all negotiations, through the blood and brain sweat of Genoa, reparations, the rock of irreconciliation and trade stagnation, have been kept insistently out of the discussions. But logic cannot be finally ignored. So long as Germany is not offered possible and practicable terms, so long will deadlock, uncertainty, misery and poverty overhang Europe. To delay recognition of that fact is only to delay prosperity and peace on one side of the European alignment as well as on the other.

CAMPAIGN PERSONALITIES.

We confess inability to see what the amount of liquor in Mr. Long's cellar has to do with his qualifications for the office of United States Senator or the issue of Democratic fitness between Senator Reed and Mr. Long. If Mr. Long has 200 quarts in his cellar, as Senator Reed implies—Mr. Long denies he has any—it may be a legal leftover from halcyon days of yore. If he has that much it is rather a tribute to his temperate restraint and, as he implies, is a dangerous lure to Senator Reed's following.

Nor can we quite see the unfitness implied by Senator Reed in Mr. Long's service as Third Assistant Secretary of State in extending courtesies to accredited representatives of foreign nations in this country. Senator Reed gives this part of Mr. Long's duties a belittling and humiliating aspect by describing him as mixing cocktails for dukes, hailing taxis and carrying grips for foreign aristocrats. Perhaps the Senator would have preferred to have British and Japanese guests, at least, kicked to their quarters and treated with the insolent ill manners which in his view is the right American policy toward foreign nations. It is creditable to Mr. Long if he well performed his task of extending proper courtesies to representatives from other nations invited to our shores and entitled to hospitable treatment. While America has gone far since the war to demonstrate her indifference to the fate of other peoples and some Americans have exhausted the vocabulary of invective in deriding other nations, happily we have not descended to boorishness in the treatment of foreign guests and the stranger within our borders.

Senator Reed's insinuations as to Mr. Long's private stock and his ridicule of his opponent as the official lackey in the State Department has significance. It indicates a phase of the Democratic senatorial contest in which good temper has passed, courtesy is abandoned and bitter personalities are the orders of the campaign.

If the campaign is to descend into a verbal slugging match it will be diverting for the outsiders, but deadly for the Democratic party of Missouri.

THE OPERATORS' CHALLENGE.

Kentucky coal mine operators in the nearest nonunion field to St. Louis have thrown a challenge to the people of the United States and particularly of St. Louis. For coal on which last winter, with less overhead expense than at present, they made money by selling at the mines at $2 and $2.25 a ton they are now, in defiance of Secretary Hoover's request, demanding $4.25 a ton. After allowance is made for freight, retailer's profit and delivery, this will bring the cost to the St. Louis consumer to approximately $8.

The extra gouge, from big and little consumer alike will not go to starving mine workers and their families, but to mine owners, who, by doubling their price are capitalizing the trouble of other people to more than double their profits. As all stored coal was mined at normal expense and as new coal comes from continuously operated nonunion mines there is no excuse for increasing the price of coal at the mine anywhere in the United States.

It is a challenge to public opinion and to the Government, which as a last resort may have to take drastic measures—even to take over and operate mines—to protect the people.

SAVE OUR ETHER.

Our ether is threatened. Steinmetz, famous electrician, who ought to be an authority, says there is no such thing as ether. THE ether, not the stuff they use in hospitals and dental chairs, but THE ether, about which books have been written and which light, heat and electric impulses, including the radio waves, have, we were told, been using as a bridge, a road or a medium—something, at any rate, on or over or through which to travel, and without which they could not advance a step.

We had to consent to the scientists inventing the ether. They could not do without it, and we could not do without them. But there were still some of us who thought that if light, heat and electricity were forms of energy, or, as some put it, modes of motion, this energy might move through space or through conducting material without any invisible, imponderable, infinitely tense and yet infinitely elastic medium on which to rest, so to speak, en route.

Still, if Steinmetz is right, and if the new facts of radio science bear him out in his denial of the ether, there is apt to be a world of trouble in the world of science for some time to come. We may see a new controversy as heated as that on evolution. We have a certain liking for the ether. It helped to fill what was formerly an infinite gulf in the scheme of things. We should like to see it saved, if there is any way to do so.

200 BOTTLES.

Generally, we have a reverent respect for Senator Reed's political strategy. But the best of Generals blunder, and when the Senator hinted that his opponent had 200 bottles in his cellar, we believe he went considerably beyond himself. He spilled, one might almost remark, the beans. It is our considered guess that this assertion will discover more fervid Long enthusiasts than anything which that candidate has said in his own behalf.

Mr. Long, of course, could not have said it himself. No candidate can afford to thrust out his chest and say: "I have 200 bottles in MY cellar!" Such colossal boasting, such incredible vainglory, would be ruinous. But the gentleman cannot be accused of flaunting it, secretly proud as he may have been. The cat was released by the very man who should have sought to conceal it. It is difficult to see how a candidate with Mr. Long's luck can lose. P. Y. A.

What a dreadfulness the subscription premium has got the press of London into! Beginning with imitation of the American custom of giving away gimcracks, the London newspapers have finally gone into the insurance business upon a vast scale, even insuring their readers free against such things as "clothes lost in the wash" and sabotage by disgruntled laundresses. Health, accident, fire and theft insurances, once sold by insurance agencies, are the enterprises of the press, which is in an orgy of generosity like nothing seen before in the history of journalism. Some day one of the London papers will offer the news of a premium which is going to be the ultimate expectation of the press unless we are mistaken.

LITTLE DANDELION.

GAY little Dandelion
Lights up the meads,
Swings on her slender foot,
Telleth her beads.
Lists to the robin's note
Poured from above:
Wise little Dandelion
Asks not for love.

Cold lie the daisy banks
Clothed but in green,
Where, in the days agone,
Bright hues were seen.
Wild pinks are slumbering,
Violets delay—
True little Dandelion
Greeteth the May.

Brave little Dandelion!
Fast falls the snow,
Bending the daffodil's
Haughty head low.
Under that fleecy tent,
Careless of cold,
Blithe little Dandelion
Counteth her gold.

Meek little Dandelion
Groweth more fair
Till dies the amber dew
Out from her hair.
High rides the thirsty sun,
Fiercely and high,
Faint little Dandelion
Closeth her eye.

Pale little Dandelion
In her white shroud
Heareth the angel breeze
Call from the cloud!
Tiny plumes fluttering
Make no delay!
Little winged Dandelion
Soareth away!

BUSINESS PROSPECTS.

JOHN GRANT DATER in Harper's Magazine.

IF the harvest turn out well—and the present prospects are generally favorable—and the farmers are able to market their crops at good prices, it will enable them to liquidate some of their indebtedness still further and increase the buying power of the community; but the country cannot look for a large business from this source alone, or at least not until some other very important matters are cleared up, including the foreign situation, the impending tariff and soldiers' bonus legislation and the all-important question of taxation, which is seriously complicated now by the certainty of a heavy Treasury deficit. • • • There is much of encouragement, no doubt, in the increased activity in the iron and steel industry, in the marked expansion of building operations throughout the country, in the larger number of motor cars turned out by various factories, and in such other evidences of improvement that have come to hand recently. They are favorable developments and they help a little, but they cannot carry us very far on the road to old-time prosperity. What is needed for that is the political, financial and commercial rehabilitation of Europe, the stabilizing of exchange, and the establishment of a value to various disorganized foreign currencies, the balancing of budgets and the lightening of the burdens of taxation everywhere, and such a reduction in production costs as will enable us to compete on equal terms with the European nations in the foreign markets and reclaim some part of our diminishing export trade in manufactured articles.

A CASH BONUS AND PROSPERITY.

From the American Review of Reviews.

SEVERAL different services, including that of soldiers' insurance under the former War Risk Insurance Bureau, are now brought together under unified direction, in what is officially termed the Veterans' Bureau. The efficiency of hospitals for service men is showing improvement, and Congress does not hesitate to provide generously. One insurance policies, which were issued by the War Risk Bureau to such a large proportion of the service men, have been allowed to lapse through nonpayment of premiums and now there are only about 600,000 policies in force, amounting to about $3,500,000,000 in the aggregate. Senator Smoot has been pressing a plan for giving paid-up insurance policies to the service men in lieu of a cash bonus. • • • The service men have more to gain from general prosperity in the country than they could possibly get from the public treasury under proposed cash bonus measures. • • • It is to their interest that taxation should be reduced rather than increased, and that Government expenditures should be cut down all along the line. Everyone agrees that disabled soldiers should have proper care and treatment, and that special facilities should be maintained for aiding ex-service men in obtaining employment, or to secure education and training for success in life.

The STORY OF MANKIND
by PROF. HENDRIK VAN LOON

Mohammed—Continued.

IN Medina Mohammed, who was a stranger, found it easier to proclaim himself a prophet than in his home city, where every one had known him as a simple camel-driver. Soon he was surrounded by an increasing number of followers, or Moslems, who accepted the Islam, "the submission to the will of God," which Mohammed praised as the highest of all virtues. For seven years he preached to the people of Medina. Then he believed himself strong enough to begin a campaign against his former neighbors who had dared to sneer at him and his Holy Mission in his old camel-driving days. At the head of an army of Medinese he marched across the desert. His followers took Mecca without great difficulty, and having slaughtered a number of the inhabitants, they found it quite easy to convince the others that Mohammed was really a great prophet.

From that time on until the year of his death, Mohammed was fortunate in everything he undertook.

There are two reasons for the success of Islam. In the first place, the creed which Mohammed taught to his followers was very simple. The disciples were told that they must love Allah, the ruler of the world, the merciful and compassionate. They must honor and obey their parents. They were warned against dishonesty in dealing with their neighbors and were admonished to be humble and charitable, to the poor and to the sick. Finally they were ordered to abstain from strong drink and to be very frugal in what they ate. That was all. There were no priests, who acted as shepherds of their flocks and asked that they be supported at the common expense. The Mohammedan churches or mosques were merely large stone halls without benches or pictures, where the faithful could gather (if they felt so inclined) to read and discuss chapters from the Koran, the Holy Book. But the average Mohammedan carried his religion with him and never felt himself hemmed in by the restructions and regulations of an established church. Five times a day he turned his face towards Mecca, the Holy City, and said a simple prayer. For the rest of the time he let Allah rule the world as he saw fit and accepted whatever fate brought him with patient resignation.

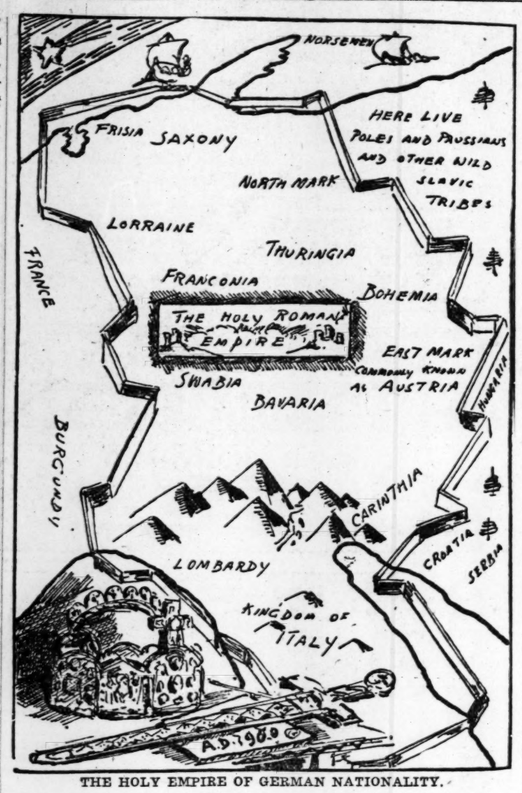

Of course such an attitude towards life did not encourage the Faithful to go forth and invent electrical machinery or bother about railroads and steamship lines. But it gave every Mohammedan a certain amount of contentment. It bade him be at peace with himself and with the world in which he lived and that was a very good thing.

The second reason which explains the success of the Moslems in their warfare upon the Christians, had to do with the conduct of those Mohammedan soldiers who went forth to do battle for the true faith. The Prophet promised that those who fell, facing the enemy, would go directly to Heaven. This made sudden death in the field preferable to a long but dreary existence upon this earth. It gave the Mohammedans an enormous advantage over the Crusaders who were in constant dread of a dark hereafter, and who stuck to the good things of this world as long as they possibly could. Incidentally it explains why even today Moslem soldiers will charge into the fire of European machine guns quite indifferent to the fate that awaits them and why they are such dangerous and persistent enemies.

Having put his religious house in order, Mohammed now began to enjoy his power as the undisputed ruler of a large number of Arab tribes. But success has been the undoing of a larger number of men who were great in the days of adversity. He tried to gain the good will of the rich people by a number of regulations which could appeal to those of wealth. He allowed the Faithful to have four wives. As one wife was a costly investment in those olden days when brides were bought directly from the parents, four wives became a positive luxury except to those who possessed camels and dromedaries and date orchards beyond the dreams of avarice. A religion which at first had been meant for the hardy hunters of the high skied desert was gradually transformed to suit the needs of the smug merchants who lived in the bazars of the cities. It was a regrettable change from the original program and it did very little good to the cause of Mohammedanism. As for the prophet himself, he went on preaching the truth of Allah and proclaiming new rules of conduct until he died, quite suddenly, of a fever on June the seventh of the year 632.

His successor as Caliph (or leader) of the Moslems was his father-in-law, Abu-Bekr, who had shared the early dangers of the prophet's life. Two years later, Abu-Bekr died and Omar ibn Al-Khattab followed him. In less than 10 years he conquered Egypt, Persia, Phoenicia, Syria and Palestine and made Damascus the capital of the first Mohammedan world empire.

Omar was succeeded by Ali, the husband of Mohammed's daughter, Fatima, but a quarrel broke out upon a point of Moslem doctrine and Ali was murdered. After his death, the caliphate was made hereditary and the leaders of the faithful who had begun their career as the spiritual head of a religious sect became the rulers of a vast empire. They built a new city on the shores of the Euphrates, near the ruins of Babylon and called it Bagdad, and organizing the Arab horsemen into regiments of cavalry, they set forth to bring the happiness of their Moslem faith to all unbelievers. In the year 700 A. D. a Mohammedan General by the name of Tarik crossed the old gates of Hercules and reached the high rock on the European side which he called the Gibel-al-tarik, the Hill of Tarik or Gibraltar.

THE HOLY EMPIRE OF GERMAN NATIONALITY.

Eleven years later in the battle of Xeres de la Frontera, he defeated the King of the Visigoths and then the Moslem army moved northward and following the route of Hannibal, they crossed the passes of the Pyrenees. They defeated the Duke of Aquitania, who tried to halt them near Bordeaux, and marched upon Paris. But in the year 732 (100 years after the death of the prophet,) they were beaten in a battle between Tours and Poitiers. On that day, Charles Martel (Charles with the Hammer) the Frankish chieftain, saved Europe from a Mohammedan conquest. He drove the Moslems out of France, but they maintained themselves in Spain, where Abd-ar-Rahman founded the Caliphate of Cordova, which became the greatest center of science and art of medieval Europe.

This Moorish kingdom, so-called because the people came from Mauretania in Morocco, lasted seven centuries. It was only after the capture of Granada, the last Moslem stronghold, in the year 1492, that Columbus received the royal grant which allowed him to go upon a voyage of discovery. The Mohammedans soon regained their strength in the new conquests which they made in Asia and Africa, and today there are as many followers of Mohammed as there are of Christ.

CHARLEMAGNE.

How Charlemagne, the King of the Franks, Came to Bear the Title of Emperor and Tried to Revive the Old Ideal of World-Empire.

The battle of Poitiers had saved Europe from the Mohammedans. But the enemy within—the hopeless disorder which had followed the disappearance of the Roman police officer—that enemy remained. It is true that the new converts of the Christian faith in Northern Europe felt a deep respect for the mighty Bishop of Rome. But that poor Bishop did not feel any too safe when he looked toward the distant mountains. Heaven knew what fresh hordes of barbarians were ready to cross the Alps and begin a new attack on Rome. It was necessary—very necessary—for the spiritual head of the world to find an ally with a strong sword and a powerful first who was willing to defend His Holiness in case of danger.

And so the Popes, who were not only very holy, but also very practical, cast about for a friend, and presently they made overtures to the most promising of the Germanic tribes who had occupied Northwestern Europe after the fall of Rome. They were called the Franks. One of their earliest Kings, called Merovech, had helped the Romans in the battle of the Catalaunian fields in the year 451, when they defeated the Huns. His descendants, the Merovingians, had continued to take little bits of imperial territory until the year 486, when King Clovis (the old French word for "Louis") felt himself strong enough to beat the Romans in the open. But his descendants were weak men who left the affairs of state to their Prime Minister, the "Major Domus" or Master of the Palace.

Pepin the Short, the son of the famous Charles Martel, who succeeded his father as Master of the Palace, hardly knew how to handle the situation. His royal master was a devout theologian, without any interest in politics. Pepin asked the Pope for advice. The Pope, who was a practical person, answered that the "power in the state belonged to him who was actually possessed of it." Pepin took the hint. He persuaded Childeric, the last of the Merovingians to become a monk and then made himself King with the approval of the other Germanic chieftains. But this did not satisfy the shrewd Pepin. He wanted to be something more than a barbarian chieftain. He staged an elaborate ceremony at which Boniface, the great missionary of the European Northwest, anointed him and made him a "King by the grace of God." It was easy to slip those words, "Dei gratia," into the coronation service. It took almost 1500 years to get them out again.

Pepin was sincerely grateful for this kindness on the part of the church. He made two expeditions to Italy to defend the Pope against his enemies. He took Ravenna and several other cities away from the Longobards and presented them to his holiness, who incorporated them in new domains into the so-called Papal State, which remained an independent country until half a century ago.

After Pepin's death, the relations between Rome and Aix-la-Chapelle or Nymwegen or Ingelheim (the Frankish Kings did not have one official residence, but traveled from place to place with all their ministers and court officers), became more and more cordial. Finally the Pope and the King took a step which was to influence the history of Europe in a most profound way.

Charles, commonly known as Carolus Magnus or Charlemagne, succeeded Pepin in the year 768. He had conquered the land of the Saxons in Eastern Germany and had built towns and monasteries all over the greater part of Northern Europe. At the request of certain enemies of Abd-ar-Rahman, he had invaded Spain to fight the Moors. But in the Pyrenees he had been attacked by the wild Basques and had been forced to retire. It was upon this occasion that Roland, the great Margrave of Breton, showed what a Frankish chieftain of those early days meant when he promised to be faithful to his King, and gave his life and that of his trusted followers to safeguard the retreat of the royal army.

During the last 10 years of the eighth century, however, Charles was obliged to devote himself exclusively to affairs of the South. The Pope, Leo III, had been attacked by a band of Roman rowdies and had been left for dead in the street. Some kind people had bandaged his wounds and had helped him to escape to the camp of Charles, where he asked for help. An army of Franks soon restored quiet and carried Leo back to the Lateran Palace, which, ever since the days of Constantine, had been the home of the Pope. That was in December of the year 799. On Christmas day of the next year, Charlemagne, who was staying in Rome, attended the service in the ancient church of St. Peter. When he arose from prayer, the Pope placed a crown upon his head, called him Emperor of the Romans and hailed him once more with the title of "Augustus," which had not been heard for hundreds of years.

Once more Northern Europe was part of a Roman empire, but the dignity was held by a German chieftain who could read just a little and never learned to write. But he could fight, and for a short while there was order, and even the rival Emperor in Constantinople sent a letter of approval to his "dear brother."

Unfortunately, this splendid old man died in the year 814. His sons and his grandsons at once began to fight for the largest share of the imperial inheritance. Twice the Carolingian lands were divided, by the treaties of Verdun in the year 843 and by the treaty of Mersen-on-the-Meuse in the year 870. The latter treaty divided the entire Frankish kingdom into two parts. Charles the Bold received the western half. It contained the old Roman province called Gaul, where the language of the people had become thoroughly romanized. The Franks soon learned to speak this language and this accounts for the strange fact that a purely Germanic land like France should speak a Latin tongue.

The other grandson got the eastern part, the land which the Romans had called Germania. Those inhospitable regions had never been part of the old empire. Augustus had tried to conquer this "far east," but his legions had been annihilated in the Teutoburg Wood in the year 9 and the people had never been influenced by the higher Roman civilization. They spoke the popular Germanic tongue. The Teuton word for "people" was "thot." The Christian missionaries therefore called the German language the "lingua theotisca" or the "lingua teutisca," the "popular dialect" and this word "teutisca" was changed into "Deutsch," which accounts for the name "Deutschland."

As for the famous Imperial Crown, it very soon slipped off the heads of the Carolingian successors and rolled back onto the Italian plain, where it became a sort of plaything of a number of little potentates who stole the crown from each other amidst much bloodshed and wore it (with or without the permission of the Pope) until it was the turn of some more ambitious neighbor. The Pope, once more sorely beset by his enemies, sent north for help. He did not appeal to the ruler of the West-Frankish kingdom, this time. His messengers crossed the Alps and addressed themselves to Otto, a Saxon Prince, who was recognized as the greatest chieftain of the different Germanic tribes.

Otto, who shared his people's affection for the blue skies and the gay and beautiful people of the Italian peninsula, hastened to the rescue. In return for his services, the Pope, Leo VIII, made Otto "Emperor," and the eastern half of Charles' old kingdom was henceforth known as the Holy Roman Empire of the German Nation."

This strange political creation managed to live to the ripe old age of eight hundred and thirty-nine years. In the year 1801, (during the presidency of Thomas Jefferson,) it was most unceremoniously relegated to the historical scrapheap. The brutal fellow who destroyed the old Germanic Empire was the son of a Corsican notary-public who had made a brilliant career in the service of the French Republic. He was ruler of Europe by the grace of his famous guard regiments, but he desired to be something more. He sent to Rome for the Pope and the Pope came and stood by while General Napoleon placed the imperial crown upon his own head and proclaimed himself heir to the tradition of Charlemagne. For history is like life. The more things change, the more they remain the same.

Commercial Interests of St. Louis

An Impending Problem

"When business resumes," we have said, for more than a year past, in talking of the future.

We are now saying it a little differently. Some of us are confident enough to say, "Now that business is resuming." Later it will be, "Now that business has resumed."

With the full resumption of business we are going to find out how important transportation is. We know it theoretically now, and some concerns which had an experience of wartime car shortage have a pretty clear idea on the subject still.

But with business again at or near normal conditions, the entire public is going to find out how important transportation is. Particularly the transportation that we will need and will not have.

During the dull period since 1920, railroad construction has been as far behind normal standards as has other construction. To keep up with business, the railroads must build, every year, enough new track to reach from New York to San Francisco, and there must be an addition, every year, of 120,000 cars and 2500 locomotives to their equipment.

But replacements and new construction have fallen behind so that mileage is 10,000 miles short of the foregoing standard, and the shortage in rolling stock is represented by about 4000 locomotives and 200,000 cars.

There are some examples of activity, such as the double-tracking work which the Frisco is now carrying on near St. Louis, and the addition of 50 locomotives, some of them seen here in transit a few days ago, to the equipment of the Southern Pacific. But, as a whole, the lessons of the car-short period of 1916-20 have not been adequately heeded.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover has predicted that car shortages, followed by marked increases in the cost of coal, will come as soon as anything like business normalcy is reached.

"We shall again see premiums of 20 cents a bushel for the use of cars for moving grain," he says. "We shall see a shortage of commodities to the consumer, and gluts upon the hands of the producer. We shall see factories filled with orders closed for lack of cars; we shall see large intermittency in employment, and we shall see the usual profiteering in commodities due to a stricture between the producer and consumer.

"There would be no difficulty," Secretary Hoover adds, "by basing such losses on the experiences we have already had, to calculate a loss to the American people of a billion dollars for each one of these periodic transportation shortages."

An added reason for railway construction now, rather than deferred into the period of full activity, is that the manufacture of the needed equipment, undertaken then, will be in competition with the needs of the industries which the railroads should now be preparing themselves to serve.

Lumber Is "Out of the Woods"

The lumber industry is in the basic class, and improved conditions in it are a good omen.

Orders have begun to outrun production in the lumber trade, and manufacturers have seen their stocks reduced, until some of them have gone out of the market temporarily, and have given all their attention to making their shipments.

For the first 20 weeks of 1922, the American Lumberman says, orders exceeded production by 13 per cent, and in the last week of that period the excess was 26 per cent.

Soft woods are in chief demand, and prices have advanced under the heavy demand. Manufacturers say that, for this time, the increase in production will be steady, but will not be so rapid as it has been, as most of the big mills are now running, some of them on night as well as day shifts.

CHAPTER XIX.

Stanhope Springs the Trap.

FOR some weeks past Jack Stanhope had been quietly making his plans. A gambler in every sense of the word, he knew that it was of no use to persist in a thing against a run of bad luck. A fellow must wait until his luck changed.

He had had had luck with Millie Sayres. Joyce St. Clair had foiled him at every touch and turn and he no longer had any hold over Joyce. She had cured herself of the drug habit and was perfectly immune to any suggestion of blackmail. The only people Joyce cared an atom about were her own family and Terence Maclean; and they knew all there was to know concerning her.

So Stanhope, in one way or another, finally became convinced that his luck was dead out where Millie Sayres was concerned, and he abandoned his sentimental pursuit of her.

However, when it came to the beautiful Mrs. Desmond, things were very different. He held Gay in the hollow of his hand.

After he had induced her to "lend" him £5000, he left her alone for awhile, except when she required drugs of him. He was docile and perfectly obedient to the humiliating role she assigned him, that of the quasi-lover who must keep out of sight.

Lulled to a sense of false security, the woman began to believe what she wished to believe, that Stanhope would remain a useful friend after her marriage and go on as before, supplying her in secret with the deadly drug which now represented life itself to her.

On her wedding morning she awoke to the fact that she had exhausted the last supply and that for the first time Stanhope had failed her. He had promised to send or bring her some more yesterday afternoon and he had not done so.

After ringing up Donald, she rang up Stanhope's flat, only to learn that he had gone out and was not expected back until after lunch. The valet informed her further that his master was leaving for the continent by the afternoon train. He would return to the flat to collect his luggage about 3 o'clock.

No, the man hadn't the faintest idea where his master might be found. Mr. Stanhope had said something about buying a new hat and seeing about some boots, and he believed that Mr. Stanhope was lunching privately with a lady, but he did not know the lady's name or where she lived.

Indeed, the man was suspiciously frank, but it was quite plain to Gay that Stanhope had either left instructions not to divulge his whereabouts, or that the servant for some malicious reasons of his own had taken that stand.

The distracted woman hung up the receiver and pressed her hands to her forehead.

She was going mad; she would be a raving lunatic by the time she should depart for the church. At 3 o'clock it would be impossible for her to get into communication with Stanhope. Her honeymoon loomed ahead as a period of horror.

At the last moment, everything was turned into confusion, for Phelps became impertinent and practically forced her discharge. One of the undermaids was summoned to take her place and Gay became more and more distracted.

It was 10 o'clock when the alteration had taken place and Gay was due to arrive at the church at 1.

She began to dress, with the housemaid's help. She wished to heaven she could cover her face and that her hands would cease their horrible trembling.

Very seldom did she touch spirits, but this morning she simply had to have something, and sent the girl to fetch some brandy. It helped a little, but not much.

Before slipping into the wonderful creation of lavender crepe and silver net which formed her wedding dress, Gay rang up Stanhope's flat again, but the answer was the same.

She finished dressing, and when she had donned the filigree silver cap with its quaint clusters of mauve and white violets over each ear, she felt that she would pass muster as a rather nervous bride.

How the rest of the day was to be endured, and the other days, she did not know.

It was now half-past 12. In another half hour, if she lived through it, she would be standing before the altar beside the man of her choice. In 15 minutes she would start for the church.

Suddenly the telephone rang.

The woman's nerves were in such a state that she screamed. Then she rushed to the table where it stood and unhooked the receiver with insane fury. The room seemed to take a giddy whirl around her as she recognized Jack Stanhope's voice at the other end.

"You wanted to speak to me about something?" he inquired, suavely polite.

"You know!" she cried, with a wrenching sob. "Oh, Jack, how could you leave me in such agony! I'm half mad. For heaven's sake jump into a taxi and come around here, at once. I'll wait."

There was a pause that to her tortured nerves lasted a hundred years.

"Jack!"

"Yes, I understand. I'm awfully sorry. I clean forgot. But I can't possibly come around to your place, now"——

"You must!"

"I say I can't possibly come. But if you have time, come here. I'll have it ready for you."

The woman did not argue. She was in the grip of a desire so fiendish that she would have sold her soul to gratify it.

"Very well," she replied.

She jumped up from the telephone.

"Agnes, is the car waiting? Bring my things. For heaven's sake, how can you be so slow! You drive me crazy. . . .I never knew such a girl!"

The housemaid was filled with wonder. She had fairly raced to do Mrs. Desmond's bidding, only to be accused of slowness. It was extraordinary. All the morning it had been the same.

Gay was to have been accompanied to church by a woman friend, there to be met by an ancient male relative who was to give her away, but she did not wait for her friend, leaving a message that Mrs. Walters was to come on, and they would meet in the vestibule.

"I want to go first to Mr. Stanhope's in Clarges street," she said, to the footman's utter astonishment as he adjusted the rug over her knees.

By the silver clock fixed in the panel below the vase of flowers it was exactly a quarter to one. There was just 15 minutes then, to get to Clarges street and back to the church in Kensington. It could not be done.

However, it is the privilege of brides to be a little late.

The brougham glided off at its top speed, which was not excessive, the clear warning bell announcing its hurry as they joined the stream of traffic in Knightsbridge.

Gay sat tense—leaning forward as though trying to speed what seemed to her an interminable progress.

Danger Signals of Childhood

By Dr. Charlotte C. West

(Copyright, 1922.)

Infantile Convulsions.

WHEN an infant is seized with convulsions, what should be done before the doctor comes?

Relaxation of the muscular system must be the first consideration. If a competent person is at hand to administer this, a few whiffs of chloroform accomplishes the desired effect more speedily than anything else. Only a few whiffs passed before the child's nostrils. The chloroform must not be held firmly against the patient's face and must not be administered by one not fully capable. I merely mention this because convulsions are sometimes speedily fatal, and in the absence of a physician this simple procedure may save a life. But I cannot too strongly emphasize the warning that only a competent person should administer these few whiffs of chloroform.

Otherwise remove the child's clothing entirely and place the little one in a warm—not hot—bath. A mustard pack acts splendidly. Make with one teaspoonful of dry mustard rubbed up with an ounce of water, to which is added one quart of boiling water. Into this a sheet or bath towel is dipped and wrapped around the child. Hot mustard poultices also act nicely, placed on the back, thighs and abdomen.

While these external measures are being used an enema should be prepared and employed as speedily as possible. This should be given while the child is in the bath or after the poultices, or whatever line of treatment is followed has been carried out.

If tincture of asafoetida is on hand make an enema with two ounces of water about the temperature of 100 degrees F., containing one teaspoonful of the tincture, and administer this. Asafoetida is a well-known anti-spasmodic, and often acts like a charm. In the absence of asafoetida, a hot soapy rectal injection will answer. When quite hot these enemas serve valuable ends in removing undigested food, and if quite hot, further stimulating relaxation. Authorities differ as to whether an emetic should be employed, but if there is reason to believe undigested food exists in the stomach, and is causing the attack, relief will be far speedier when this is removed.

Of course, nothing can be given by mouth until the child is out of the spasm, then wine of ipecac in 15 to 20 drop doses in a little water may be administered as soon as the child can swallow. Remember not to use an emetic unless the seizure can be traced to undigested food.

After-Dinner Tricks

No. 145—Disappearing Coin

A coin is placed on a sheet of paper, and is covered with an inverted tumbler over which a napkin is thrown. Upon lifting the cloth the coin has disappeared, but it returns when the tumbler is removed.

Paste a circular disc of white paper to the mouth of the tumbler, and have it lying on the table, inverted. Being the same color as the tablecloth the paper will escape notice. When the coin placed is on the tablecloth (or on a white sheet of paper) look around for something to place over it, and apparently pick up the tumbler at random. Cover the tumbler with a napkin and place it over the coin. When the napkin is removed the coin will be invisible through the glass, due to the paper disc, the presence of which is unsuspected. Removing the tumbler brings back the coin.

(Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Co.)

Stuffed Loin of Veal.

STUFFED loin of veal is a delicious cold meat which can hardly be distinguished from chicken. The forcemeat gives it a decided relish. Spread a loin of veal, from which the bones have been removed, on a floured board. Cover with forcemeat. Roll up neatly, tie at intervals with narrow tape to keep it in place, and roast in a well-heated oven, basting it frequently. On taking the meat from the oven, let it cool and remove the tape.

DAINTY SWISS PUDDING

CUT out the center of a fresh round sponge cake, leaving an inch and a half wall. Whip one pint of heavy cream solid, sweeten and flavor it with vanilla, chill, then fill the cake, invert it quickly, cover with hot chocolate sauce.

SUGGESTIONS FOR CLOTHING FOR THE V

The Vacation Wardrobe

CLOTHES FOR THE COUNTRY AND FARM

First of a Series of Articles

By Margery Wells

ARE you planning to leave the city for a fortnight or a month of rest and fun?

Now, there is one cheering thought about an outfit for the country. It is inexpensive. It reaches about the lowest level of all summer wardrobes in the matter of cost.

There are the ginghams, the organdies, the swisses and the voiles. All of these have come down to figures that cheer our hearts as we look at the price tags conspicuous in the shop windows. And if by any chance you are smart enough to make up the simple little frocks yourself, why then you have a feeling of being transported suddenly to the days before the war, when a summer frock was just something to be purchased out of the change pocketbook—nothing to be considered in the least seriously.

You use the pattern of the cotton material these days for its chiefest design, and the matter of sewing dissolves itself into a mere nothingness.

Even cretonne is all for the country, and a dress of this material lasts through thick and thin in a summer's experience because it is so staunchly woven and so practically colored.

For the comfortable, easy hours of the day you will want a, set of smocks—just sliver-over-the-head affairs that are pleasant to wear, simple to wash and fortified against showing the dirt too readily.

Choose cotton crepe or cretonne for these and wear them with a knockabout skirt made of cotton ratine, khaki, jersey or some of the materials which resemble these. Have them made something like the one in the picture. They can be brightly colored, if you wish, so that the spirit will stay continually joyful through the vibration of the color, or you can have them dull and neutral in tone if that suits your fancy best.

Have a tam or a round, close felt hat to wear with these when your hair needs protection from the sun or rain.

You will want a suit of some sort. And, if you can manage it, make the suit white. They are so smart looking and so very girlish in their effect.

There is a plain little white suit in the picture, with its white felt hat and some bright posies to forestall any possible monotony. It would do for many occasions and would be more dressy than the ordinary suit, making it a lovely thing for afternoon parties at the country club or for formal luncheons, if your country experience includes this sort of entertainment.

A top coat—something that will do for rough and tumble wear and which will, at the same time, do for a warm wrap when motoring or for wear on chilly evenings. A tweed top coat is excellent for these occasions. It should be unlined and easy to throw around wherever you happen to be.

Perhaps you will like a cape of tweed better than you will a coat. Capes are as smart as can be and you will never know until you have tried how much comfort lies in the folds of one long, woolly, homespun cape. Yours can be a bright color which will be good for cool evenings and just as suitable, in the present state of fashion, for any rough sort of outdoor wear.

Now for afternoons! Well, one of those handmade voiles or linens would be just the thing. They are as simple as can be, they are easy to launder, and they always come out looking so fresh and beautiful and summery. They are made in all colors and they have a way of keeping the faint tinting of color which is so particularly becoming for hot summer days.

You will need a pair of white pumps for dressy afternoon wear, and you will want some sort of rubber-soled shoes for walking and for all kinds of morning and more informal wear. Then, again, you will find that you do want white—not only white shoes, but white stockings, too. And, here is a hint about stockings. They are wearing lisle this summer for all kinds of wear except evening.

A sweater is a good thing to have along. It makes a pretty dress with a white linen or a white flannel skirt, and it stands in good stead when you need a little extra warmth about your shoulders.

For dances—there are always dances—have a crisp little organdy, or a hand-trimmed crepe de chine, or a simply made georgette crepe. Choose colors that are light and becoming, and dance your way into happiness without being in the least overburdened with too many clothes.

Extra things that are good in the country are:

A picture hat drooping over the ears and trimmed with masses of flowers.

Economical Omelet

MIX three tablespoons flour, a half teaspoon of baking powder, a teaspoon salt in a bowl. Then add slowly 15 tablespoons rich sweet cream, then four well-beaten egg yolks; lastly the whites, beaten stiff. Mix all carefully and well. Have spider hot and put into it a scant teaspoon fresh drippings. (Butter is too apt to burn.) When browned a little, pour in the batter; cover spider closely with a basin and place in a moderately hot place on the stove and cook eight to 10 minutes, or until a straw will come out clean. Then fold and serve on a hot platter. Minced ham is a nice addition.

Baked Almond Pudding.

POUR one cupful of hot milk over the crumbs of six stale lady fingers and eight macaroons, let cool, then add a half-saltspoonful of salt, a half-cupful each of sugar and blanched, chopped almonds, the yolks of two beaten eggs, and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat well, then add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Pour into a souffle dish, lightly buttered, and set in a pan of water to bake. Serve with sweetened whipped cream.

Fashion News Notes

PARIS.—Petunia is the fashionable color. It is, however, such a bright and peculiar color that Parisiennes are very careful to select frocks in this shade by daylight instead of by electric light. Petunia is a vastly different tint by night than it is by day. Crystal and silver trimming is being used a great deal with petunia. Even if the entire gown is not of this deep, rich red, there is at least a girdle or a panel of it somewhere. In velvet, petunia is particularly effective.

LONDON.—One dull spot of sealing-wax is the newest ornament for flowers, whether they bloom on gowns or hats. A species of chrysanthemums in velvet or taffeta, very large and very much flattened out, is a favorite decoration on various types of gowns as well as on the large crinoline hats without which at present no garden party is a success. The touch of sealing wax must be in the same shade as the flower and on the tip of a petal.

LONDON.—The amazing outcry which went up from English women over the longer skirt edict from Paris still persists with undiminished force. Noted hostesses and dancing teachers, as well as male painters and modistes, are writing to the papers daily to express their horror at the return of skirts which touch the ankle. English women, in spite of Queen Mary's command that court gowns shall be within five inches of the floor, declare they will never wrap yards of cloth around their ankles except at a court reception. The result of the agitation is that skirts on smart women are a little longer than last year, but still a good ten or twelve inches from the ground.

but still a good ten or twelve from the ground.

PARIS.—Tie your summer your wrist, and who cares wind blows? Large chap chantilly lace, dyed in blues and corals or in dull today a long narrow scarf lace extending over the ri der in a graceful loop a to the wrist with a jewe

let. Often there is a long beaded tassel on the bracelet, the beads repeating the color of the few bronze leaves or the tiny bouquet of metallic flowers on the far upturned pinnacle of the brim.

NEW YORK.—The Russian influence, so strong in all kinds of apparel, has even extended to the bathing suit. If the suit is not fringed in reminiscence of things Spanish, it is likely to be made with a peasant blouse. One such suit in black surf satin is bound in yellow with an embroidered border of green, yellow, red and blue.

PARIS.—The simplicity which for a time was characteristic of warm weather gowns has vanished. Clothes are complicated now. Two or three different materials may go into one frock and the complicated effect is heightened by elaborate draperies and some sort of overgarment. This garment is invariably a cape, none too simple itself in design. A tall, lithe figure is a necessity if one would look well in the latest intricate though lovely twist which fashion has given to summer clothes.

PARIS.—A hat with a broken brim is the height of chic. Trimmings perch over and under the break, which may be a mere indentation or a fairly wide gap. In the latter case, the gap is filled in with flowers, feathers or ribbon rosettes. If the hat is wide and with an unbroken brim, it must narrow sharply in front and back. Crinoline hats retain their popularity, though for town wear the hat of crinkled satin is the newest.

LONDON.—For week-end trips into the country the London woman is wearing a trim little suit of gabardine in tan or navy. Fancy braid curls and spirals add a dressy effect to both coat and skirt. The coat must be of the coatee type and if fastened at all it is held together only by a pair of silk loops or a tasseled cord. The coatee of course flares back smartly to reveal a crepe de chine waist coat-blouse in some bright color or in the shade of the suit, but ornamented with a bit of gay embroidery.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

By Thornton W. Burgess

WHITEFOOT the Wood Mouse was hurt. Yes, sir, Whitefoot was hurt. He was very much hurt. It wasn't a bodily hurt; it was an inside hurt. It was a hurt that made his heart ache. And to make it worse, he couldn't understand it at all.

It was this way: He and little Mrs. Whitefoot had built over an old home of Melody the Wood Thrush into what Whitefoot thought was the finest home any Wood Mouse ever had. Together they had been very, very happy there. Each day Whitefoot had grown more proud of that home. It was very, very comfortable, and, better still, it was very safe, for it was a home that no one would be likely to suspect of being a home. Whitefoot had seen some of his worst enemies go right past with no more than a glance at it.

Then the thing happened that had so hurt Whitefoot. He had been met at the little round doorway on the under side of that home by little Mrs. Whitefoot. "You can't come in," said she.

"Why can't I?" demanded Whitefoot, in the greatest surprise.

"Never mind why. You can't, and that is all there is to it," replied little Mrs. Whitefoot.

"You mean I can't ever come in any more?" asked Whitefoot.

"I don't know about that," replied Mrs. Whitefoot, "but you can't come in now, nor for some time. I think the best thing you can do is to go back to your home in the hollow stub."

Whitefoot stared at little Mrs. Whitefoot quite as if he had thought she had gone crazy. Then he lost his temper. "I guess I'll come in if I want to," said he. "This home is quite as much my home as it is yours. You have no right to keep me out of it. Just you get out of my way."

But little Mrs. Whitefoot didn't get out of his way. And do what he would, Whitefoot couldn't get in. You see, she quite filled that little round doorway. Finally he had to give up trying. Three times he came back and each time he found little Mrs. Whitefoot in the doorway and each time she drove him away. Finally, for lack of any other place to go, he returned to his old home in the old stub. Once he had thought this the finest home possible, but now, somehow, it didn't suit him at all. The truth is, he missed little Mrs. Whitefoot, and so what had once been a home was now only a place in which to hide and sleep.

Whitefoot's anger had not lasted long. It had been replaced by that hurt feeling. He felt that he must have done something little Mrs. Whitefoot did not like. But though he thought and thought, he couldn't remember a single thing. On two or three nights he went back to see if Mrs. Whitefoot felt any differently, but found she didn't. Finally she told him rather sharply to go away and stay away. After that Whitefoot didn't venture over to the new home. He would sometimes sit a short distance away and gaze at it longingly. All the joy had gone out of the beautiful springtime for him. He was quite as unhappy as he had been before he met little Mrs. Whitefoot. You see he was even more lonely than he had been then. And added to this loneliness was that hurt feeling.

"If I could understand it, it wouldn't be so bad," he kept saying over and over again to himself, "but I don't understand it. I don't understand why Mrs. Whitefoot doesn't love me any more."

Maxims of a Modern Maid

By Marguerite Mooers Marshall.

IN love, woman is selective—if she can't have the mate she wants, she is very likely not to have any at all. But man is collective and takes as his motto, "The more the merrier."

A fool never seems quite so stupid to a woman as when he is trying to make love to her. Yet when a female moron casts lovelorn glances at any man, he at once begins to think that he's misjudged her, and that she's really "a bright little woman," after all!

The clever girl of yesteryear used to specialize in what she called "platonic friendship;" nowadays, she calls it "being a good pal,"—and, as ever, Cupid calls the turn!

Husband and wife can differ amicably on politics, religion, literature, sport—and yet they'll fight for days about whether the new car should be taken out in the rain.

The truly modern woman may be defined as one who does not care to be praised at the expense of the sex to which she belongs.

It must be nice to be a man. In women's society, at any rate, he needs no conversation; it is sufficient to have mastered the art of autobiography.

Sometimes a cat says "Miau! miau!" and sometimes she asks if you aren't glad skirts are coming down—"since the very short ones are only becoming to YOUNG women!"

A divorcee's past is usually not nearly so interesting as her future.

SAYS THE SPARROW.

SAID the cocky English sparrow to the Bird of Paradise:
"The milliners have got you up a tree;"
Your feathers in the market may command a fancy price,
But when you lose 'em you're a sight to see.

"The ladies love your plumage, with its scintillating shades,
And for a feather, any price will pay;
But at hustling for a living I can give you cards and spades,
And I lick my weight in wild cats every day.

"Although fine feathers make fine birds, according to the dope,
I'm quite contented with the ones I wear,
For when with opposition you are called upon to cope,
Fine feathers never get you anywhere.

"You may be a thing of beauty and a joy for evermore,
When all your fancy feathers are intact;
But when somebody plucks 'em for a millinery store
You'll look like 30 cents, and that's a fact."

MY FAVORITE STORIES

By IRVIN S. COBB

TIRED OF DEALING WITH CROOKS.

A RUGGED person, who had acquired a considerable fortune in the wetgoods business and kindred lines of endeavor in the old, wide-open days in Denver, decided to invest some of his savings in oil and mining stocks. From this beginning he presently progressed to the point where he became an active partner in a stock-brokerage establishment in Chicago. The venture, so far as he was concerned, did not prove a success. Between two suns both of his partners vanished and he was left to face a large deficit.

Expensive litigation ensued. While the wreckage was being cleared away by legal methods, the disillusioned ex-saloonist bared his inner feelings to his lawyer. It was the lawyer who told me what the client, speaking in all seriousness, had confided to him:

"Hal," said the old fellow, "I'm through with this game. I'm goin' to take what's left—ef so be there is anything left—and go back out West, where I belong. This here stock-broking ain't for me. The trouble with it is that it's so full of crooks you don't know who to trust. You can't put no dependence in what these fellows tell you. They'll hand you what seems to be a straight line of goods and then turn right around and double-cross you.

"Now, I ain't been used to doin' business that way. Before I came here I never traded with none but square guys. For instance, now, you take it when I was runnin' that bar in Denver. A fellow that I knowed would drop in to see me and show me some jewelry or silverware or somethin' and ask me what I'd give him for it. I'd ask him where he got it and he'd say to me: 'I lifted it tonight at Jones, the banker's, house.' 'All right,' I'd say, 'I'll give you so much for it and take my chances on cleanin' up a little profit on the reward that'll be offered.' He'd say that suited him and I'd hand him the money and he'd beat it out of town. Then, next mornin', sure enough, there'd be a piece in the paper sayin' the residence of Mr. Jones, the banker, had been robbed the night before, and I'd know I'd been doin' business with a square guy."
